Defeat a Blessing.
Will Hitler Fall?
Mr. Baruch Will Write.
Commuting 65 Years.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE PRESIDENT, a Harvard man, saw all three Harvard crews beaten, his son rowing in one. The public, fond of President Roosevelt, will say:

"Too bad, he should have seen his boy win."

The President will not say that. He knows the best thing for a young man is to be beaten once or twice in the beginning. That trains him to avoid more important beatings later. S. S. Carvalho, very wise newspaper man, said long ago to a young friend who was succeeding rapidly:

"Be careful. What you need is one or two first class failures, and you'll get them if you go too fast."

It was a sound prediction.

EUROPE REPORTS that Chancellor Hitler's dictatorship lacks the Mussolini, Kemal, Stalin "reinforcement." That makes dictators stand up. The former Kaiser predicts Hitler's fall, and his replacement by a military dictatorship not later than next September.

Wilhelm Hohenzollern is willing to return to Germany and resume business at the old stand if he is invited. As regards Hitler, the former Kaiser should be a good prophet. When he ruled, Jews were excluded from the German diplomatic service, and that service made every mistake that could be made in its reports to the Kaiser; reporting that England would not interfere with the invasion of Belgium, that Italy would stick to the triple alliance, that Russia would not side with France.

LONDON REPORTS a "swing toward the Kaiser."

With all the intelligence of the German nation, the ability of its scientists, the training of its people under the social democratic party and the German Republic, it would be a pity if Germany should have to "begin all over again," simply because it was side-tracked by the Austrian dictator.

PERHAPS HE is going overboard, perhaps he isn't. But, in the meantime, Hitler continues to use a tone of command, and threat. Germany, having declared a moratorium, the British comically indignant in view of their own conduct, warn Germany:

"We shall seize all German balances in this country and apply them on your debt."

Hitler says:

"If you do that, we'll retaliate. Seizing everything you have here, and, what's more, we shall discontinue all commercial relations with the British Empire.

The big war of blood may be followed by an economic and commercial money-war, almost as bad. That worries this country less than any other, for so far as living and prospering are concerned, we are as independent of Europe as we are of the planets Mars, Mercury, Venus, Saturn, and the outside ones.

A SIGN of the times that wise men will heed comes with Mr. Bernard M. Baruch's announcement that he will retire from Wall Street, "to write three books for the guidance of youth."

Few men know Wall Street better than Mr. Baruch; few have known it more profitably, according to his friends.

When you see an experienced fisherman, with all his tackle and bait walking away from a "fishing hole" you conclude that the hole is fished out.

When Mr. Baruch leaves Wall Street to write three books, you suspect that the stock exchange pool for the time being is considered "fished out," by an expert.

ANOTHER THING, men go to Wall Street to fish for dollars, and want to catch good dollars. Nobody knows what our dollars will be like soon, whether they will be worth catching and keeping. Mr. Baruch would oblige admirers if for "the guidance of youth" and old age, he would write three books as follows:

1—"How to get it."
2—"How to keep it."
3—"How to invest it safely."

MR. ADDISON H. DAY, eighty-four years old, New York banker and world's champion railroad commuter, retires after sixty-five years of commuting to and from his bank and his home in New Jersey. In the bank, Mr. Day attended to business. At home his time was devoted to his grandchildren, to his flower-garden, and to dominoes.

A typical American business man doing the same thing, day

50-MILE GALE WHIPS CITY, LOSS HEAVY

Lightning Bolt, Wind Wreck Foundry, Homes Damaged

Property damage amounting to thousands of dollars was caused by the terrific windstorm which struck the Pittsburgh district last night in its sweep across the eastern half of the country.

A foundry building was wrecked, houses were unroofed, electric wires, billboards and awnings were torn down and trees were uprooted by the wind which blew steadily at 50 miles an hour for 15 minutes. The Weather Bureau instruments were sent up to the 80-mile mark by the gusts of wind.

The top floor of the three-story brick Lathwood Foundry Company Building, Thirtieth street and Pulaski way, below Bigelow boulevard, was shattered by lightning and blown into the street, damaging two buildings opposite it.

HOUSE CRUSHED

The debris crushed a frame house at 3004 Pulaski way, occupied by Joseph Martin and his family and damaged the roof of the two-story brick building occupied by the Pittsburgh Decorative Products Company. The Martin family escaped injury. The foundry building has been vacant more than a year.

Firemen and police dug through the debris after receiving a report that John A. Walsh, of 3019 Pulaski way, had been trapped under the wreckage. Walsh returned from work in the midst of the search.

HILL PASTOR ATTACKED BY MOB

Hightower, Injured In Riot, Placed Under Arrest

The Hill District's crusading Negro preacher, the Rev. A. V. B. Hightower, got into a pack of trouble today doing a bit of crusading.

After Police Inspector J. H. Schnurr and his riot squad had pulled a crowd of about 1,000 irate Center avenue citizens off him, he was taken to Passavant Hospital for treatment. But first he was booked at Center Avenue Police Station, charged with disorderly conduct and pointing firearms.

It all started, and ended, when Hightower, who on week days runs a private detective agency, tried to serve a warrant on Herman Dickson, 32, of 1541 Center avenue, accusing him of operating a gambling house, the preacher told Inspector Schnurr.

Schnurr said Hightower was carrying a gun when he was arrested at Center avenue and Arthur street.

Dickson, also arrested on a disorderly charge, told Schnurr:

"Hightower was trying to shake me down."

The preacher explained he was only trying to serve a warrant out of Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson's Mt. Lebanon office.

ROBERT S. SOLES . . . . HE MARRIED HIS "STAR WITNESS"

Mr. Soles, prosperous McKeesport ex-Army officer recently acquitted in the death of his first wife, Mrs. LaRoux Soles, today revealed as the secret bridegroom of Mrs. Hardy, a defense witness.

Blonde Mrs. Hardy, the attractive blonde nurse who helped Mr. Soles to win his acquittal, today a bride. Her first husband died following their divorce, her only son is in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

ELOPEMENT OF COUPLE REVEALED

Newlyweds Move Into Home Where La Roux Was Fatally Shot

By WILLIAM PEARR

Bob Soles, central figure in one of Allegheny County's most spectacular murder trials, has married Rose Hardy, the attractive blonde nurse who helped him to win an acquittal on a charge of killing his first wife, La Roux Soles.

They eloped on June 7 to Greensburg, where the knot was tied, but the marriage was revealed today for the first time.

They were married by the Rev. J. E. Wagner, of Greensburg, one hour after obtaining a license at the Courthouse.

The prosperous ex-Army captain and his bride today moved into the big Soles home in Jenny Lind street. Until today Rose had been living in a dim third-floor apartment above Soles' office.

BRIDE DIRECTS MOVING

The bride supervised the moving of her effects. She appeared fresh and dainty in a white summer outfit. Perched on her head at a charming angle was a medium-sized hat.

Soles' aged mother has given her blessing to the newlyweds, it was disclosed today. A day or two after the marriage Soles went to

DISTRICTS BACK PWA TOLL PLAN

Without a dissenting vote, 75 representatives of southern Allegheny County communities, excepting Dormont and Mt. Lebanon, today are on record in favor of the proposed $29,000,000 Allegheny County Authority projects.

This group, meeting in Carnegie High School last night, defended the tolls on the Liberty Tubes as "necessary in order to get the improvements," while other South Hills residents meeting in Hillsdale Avenue School, Dormont, booed Commissioner C. M. Barr's defense of the tolls.

Attorney James H. Duff, leading the citizens' fight for all the projects, declared it was vital that they "go through without opposition in order to give 12,000 men work for two years."

The Dormont group unanimously passed a resolution condemning the toll idea as "unnecessary and unjustified" and attacked the proposed construction of a plaza and ramps to the tunnels as "a waste of public funds."

The motion was thrown before the group in a fiery attack on politicians in general by Attorney George P. Kountz.

The Carnegie meeting took the stand that it was better to have the grant with tolls than not to have them at all.

SPYGLASS AIDS ROBBERY CASE

A woman with a "long-distance" spyglass today testified for the government in the arraignment of two Negro youths on a charge of breaking into the Sharpsburg postoffice, June 14.

Mrs. Helen Scott, of Baker street, was able to corroborate the government's witnesses, although she was a mile and a half away when one of the men was captured.

Watching for her pet racing pigeons, Mrs. Scott testified before the United States Commissioner today that she saw Eddie Mitchell, 27, Negro, of Sharpsburg, go to a box car in the Sharpsburg railroads yards and tear up some letters last Tuesday.

Mrs. Scott then saw officers, who had been in hiding, capture Mitchell. They later arrested Leo Trent, 25, Negro, of Butler street.

Both men had previously been questioned by postoffice inspectors and police. They were released and officers were detailed to watch them.

CENT INCREASE FOR MILK NEAR

An increase in the price of milk to 11 cents a quart today has been proposed to the Milk Control Board at Harrisburg by the milk marketing committee of Western Pennsylvania, representing 19 counties. Decision was reached at a meeting last night in Fort Pitt Hotel.

The control board was asked to set a price of $2.38 per hundredweight based on a 11-cent retail quart delivered at the door and a nine and one-half-cent resale quart at stores. The price sought is one cent above prevailing prices.

Universal Service.

RENO, Nev., June 23.—Part of an exchange of husbands was completed here when Mrs. Victor M. Earle and Alexander B. Johnson, Westchester County (N. Y.) broker, were married in Carson City.

Just two hours before, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Earle, both socially prominent and the mothers of three and four children, respectively, had received divorces at a secret hearing here in which the testimony was limited to a recital of instances of incompatibility. No mention was made that husbands were to be "swapped."

And today, Mrs. Johnson was on a train chugging eastward to New York where, she said, she and Earle, wealthy real estate operator, are to be married without delay.

Johnson arrived in Reno during the divorce trial and afterward motored to Carson City with Mrs. Earle for the ceremony.

The two women are close friends and were together much of the time while establishing residences in Nevada. And the men likewise are friends.

Johnson recently admitted that he had fallen in love with Earle's wife and that Earle loved his. He said:

"There is a most happy and agreeable understanding. Everybody is pleased. A proper settlement has been made to everybody's advantage. All concerned remain the best of friends."

Harriman Secretary Plunges to Death

NEW YORK, June 23.—(INS.)—The world came to an end for Sarah A. Burke, 55, when Joseph W. Harriman, banker, was found guilty of misusing the funds of his institution. She was his secretary for 22 years, and he was the hero of her narrow life.

And so the spinster yesterday jumped to her death from the twenty-seventh floor of a Fifth avenue building.

3 GUNMEN ROB G. O. P. CLUB

The president and steward of the Dalzell Republican Club, 4406 Butler street, long prominent as a meeting place of noted political figures, were held up by three armed bandits in the club early today.

In the same room where the late Mayor Charles Kline, Joseph Armstrong, Max Leslie and others gathered for over a quarter of a century, the bandits found Daniel Lederer, 67-year-old president, and Bert Torrance, 45, of 54 Rodgers avenue, steward.

The intruders, wearing handkerchiefs over their faces, ordered Lederer and Torrance from the second to the third floor of the building. There, they tied Torrance's hands behind his back with his own belt.

After taking $40 from Lederer, $4 from Torrance, $70 from the cash register and six bottles of whisky, they locked the two men in a closet.

Jerry Baldwin, of Forty-second street, a city employe, told police he saw the bandits leaving the building as he entered. He said the robbers wore caps pulled down over their faces.

Meanwhile, Lederer and Torrance, after a short imprisonment in the closet, had found a hammer and smashed their way to freedom.

The Dalzell Club has been the scene of many important gatherings of leading Republicans.

Love Slave Notes Hint Bride's Death

Letters Promise Wealth Through 'Miracle'

International News Service.

VIENNA, June 23.—New letters from Ivan Poderjay to his blonde French wife, Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, were discovered today which definitely link the Jugo-Slavian with the disappearance of Miss Agnes Tuferson, New York lawyer whom he married last December, the Vienna police believe.

In one of the letters, written before Miss Tuferson's disappearance, Poderjay said:

"A miracle will happen soon, making us both rich."

The letters were found in a secret compartment of a trunk in the home where Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand lived here.

An astounding picture of a strong-willed woman who drove her protesting "love slave" into a bigamous marriage was revealed by the letters, police said.

The letters revealed an amazing side to Poderjay's nature, police said. Although posing as a "Roughneck Romeo," he wrote Mme. Ferrand ardent love letters in which he portrayed her as his "master" and "king."

Discovery of these letters followed the earlier finding in the Poderjay apartment of a "torture chamber" where police believe sadistic love rites were practiced.

Nudism Aired, Divorce Off, Plan Honeymoon

Brickbats and denials, enlivened by stories of strolls in the nude about the house, today resulted in a reconciliation between Karl H. Linn, swimming instructor in the Pittsburgh schools and his wife, Katherine M. Myers Linn, former nurse, of 5814 Black street.

Linn, e plaining the reconciliation, said that while lawyers were arguing over legal points the estranged couple got together and straightened out their difficulties. They then asked the court to stop the trial.

Linn said they would have a second honeymoon.

Charging desertion and indignities, Linn's suit for divorce from his wife became something of a boomerang in court here yesterday when witnesses for Mrs. Linn told of her husband's nudist inclinations around the house.

Of Linn's attitude toward her and the couple's children, Mrs. Linn testified:

"When the second baby came, my husband never looked at it. When the two children had the whooping cough, he told me to let them strangle to death."

Attorney W. H. Colvin, representing the swimming instructor, asked Judge H. H. Rowand to dismiss the proceedings after the reconciliation. A previous motion for dismissal by Attorney David H. Harrison, counsel for Mrs. Linn, on the ground that Linn had failed to substantiate his charges, was denied.

BUILDING MATERIAL PRICE CUT TO AID HOUSING BILL SEEN

10-15 PER CENT DECREASES PREDICTED

Industry Not Waiting Signing of Act, Spokesman Says

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP.)—Downward revision of building material prices under NRA codes, to reinforce the administration home building and repair program, was said today by an authority in the construction industry to be planned within the next fortnight.

Not even awaiting President Roosevelt's signature of the housing bill, the industry was depicted as contemplating cuts of from 10 to 15 per cent in its charges. The spokesman, who did not want his named used, was in a position to know the facts.

While components of the industry have insisted that present cost-protection prices have been the minimum at which plants could be operated and employment maintained at maximum, it was said leaders in the business expect the housing program to so increase volume that there will be no decrease in employment and net profits will suffer but little.

TO ACCEPT SMALLER PROFIT

A drive to reduce building costs has been under way for some time. The reduction has two main objectives:

To increase activities under the housing program, which is designed to encourage building of new homes and the repairing of old, and to carry out the announced policy of NRA to keep prices from mounting to excess.

Increased volume of building activity will permit a narrower margin between production costs and selling prices.

It was predicted also that it will more than offset the increased cost of labor, which in some of the building industries, especially lumber, has risen from 50 to as high as 400 per cent.

TO DRAMATIZE PROGRAM

Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief chief, is expected to take charge of the housing program unless he personally signifies a contrary preference to the President. This he may do, in view of his liking for present duties.

Plans are being made to dramatize the program with celebrations, similar to those under which NRA was launched, with huge parades throughout the country, the informant said.

The building materials industry will be among the first to "get on the band wagon," it was added, with their announcement of price slashes. The lowered prices will have the complete sanction of the government.

When the plan was first broached, the informant said there was some discussion with labor leaders about a method of reducing labor costs, but no agreement was reached.

LABOR LOCAL PROBLEM

The industries intend to go ahead with price cutting and then make efforts to adjust labor costs, if that is deemed necessary.

It has been predicted that such problems may be treated as local in nature with the possibility of labor accepting a lower hourly rate in exchange for a guaranteed weekly wage. This, however, still is in the formulative stage.

Lumbermen and other building material manufacturers today said the housing program is the most important plan so far advanced by the administration toward increased use of such products and betterment of the industrial outlook.

While reticent to talk on the subject, one operator expressed a belief that the welfare of the lumber industry in the Pacific coast area and the South throughout the coming winter and spring months depends on success of the housing program.

PRESIDENT GOES HOME TO WORK

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 23.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt headed today for a week-end at home, carrying a heavy bundle of business for disposition in the quiet of his study after a happy day on the Thames River watching the annual Harvard-Yale crew races.

Government affairs overtook the President last night within a few minutes after observing the record-breaking race won by Yale. He read a telegram from the West Coast appealing for intervention in the longshoremen's strike. He sent a message to Gov. Merriam that he was referring the problem to Secretary Perkins for immediate attention.

In the bulging brief case of the President as he took to a motor car today were some bills passed by the closing session of Congress. Some were slated for veto. The fate of the Frazier-Laemke farm mortgage moratorium measure was unknown.

Expecting to reach Hyde Park this afternoon, the President made no appointments for the week-end. Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied him to the ancestral home on the Hudson.

COUNCIL CHANGE ON CLAIM NEAR

City Council may reverse its stand on a resolution giving the city solicitor, treasurer and controller the right to settle the city's claims against the closed Pennsylvania Trust Company, it was indicated yesterday.

Councilman P. J. McArdle said he would not vote to support the resolution, which was sent back to Council after passing by a 7 to 2 vote Monday. He asserted:

"I had no interest in it other than to allow the settlement of the claims as soon as possible. Council did not originate the resolution. It came from the administration."

The resolution involves compromises on notes which the city holds as guarantee for its more than $1,000,000 deposits in the bank.

Many of the notes are made or indorsed by city and county officials and men prominent in the business and political life of the city and state.

GARBAGE SITES FACE NO VETO

If City Council repeats itself Monday, following approval of the two incinerator sites yesterday in Finance Committee, the two bills will become law, because Mayor McNair said today he would not veto the measures.

The Mayor said:

"No, I won't veto the bills. That's a legislative matter and up to Council."

McNair has been talking disparagingly about the incinerators for some time.

Council, in committee, approved the Brillitn Pumping Station site by a vote of 6 to 3, and the Reedsdale and Chateau streets site by 5 to 4.

PARTY JOBS O. K. WITH M'NAIR

Mayor McNair has countermanded the order against city employes holding party jobs.

With the federal government taking new steps to enforce its order against double job-holding, the Mayor has reversed his position in regard to the city payroll.

He said:

"That order is not in effect now. I don't see where it can be used except just before a primary. I didn't want any employe to use the power of patronage against any other employe"

Among the city employes who benefit from the Mayor's new stand are Mrs. Bonnie Quaill, chairman of the Thirty-second Ward; Magistrate Charles F. Papale, chairman of the Twelfth Ward, and George P. Jordan, chairman of the Twenty-sixth Ward.

WOMEN'S GROUP FOR SCHNADER AND REED

But They 'Disown' Coleman as Leader

A group of independent Republican women, meeting yesterday, decided to support Senator David A. Reed for re-election and Attorney General William A. Schnader as a candidate for Governor, but declined to be associated with the Republican County Committee, headed by William H. Coleman.

A statement by Miss Hannah Patterson, after the meeting, said the women would campaign "as a group or as individuals for the Republican state candidates." From another source it was learned that the formation of a committee for campaign work is doubtful, and that whatever is done for the ticket will be contributed individually.

The women's group had opposed the re-election of Coleman as county chairman and had appealed to Reed and Schnader for assistance in blocking him. The county chairman, however, refused to step aside, and last Saturday steam-rollered through his re-election. In discussion yesterday among the women there was less enthusiasm for Schaner than for Reed.

Among those present yesterday were: Miss Hannah Patterson, a leader in the Citiens' League; Mrs. A. W. Powell, president of the Women's Republican Club of Western Pennsylvania; Mrs. Harvey S. Fouse, Mrs. C. A. Verner, Mrs. William Anderson, Mrs. John R. Dierst, Mrs. Mabel Bartels, Mrs. Laura J. Hinnau, former county vice chairman; Mrs. J. B. Roessing and Mrs. John M. Phillips, who led the fight last year for Gustav L. Schramm for Judge of Juvenile Court; Mrs. J. G. Chalfant and Mrs. Enoch Rauh, former city director of welfare.

6 FACE HEARING IN EAST END ROBBERIES

Former Detectives Lauded by Park For Arrests

Six men arrested by East End police as members of an alleged safe-cracking gang suspected of scores of robberies, faced arraignment in East End Police Court today.

The suspects, rounded up during the last two weeks, were said by police to have admitted seven robberies in the East End. All but one of the suspects have police records, according to Inspector Jerry L. Deasy.

For three successive nights the prisoners were questioned at the police station by District Attorney Andrew T. Park, who commended Deasy and the plainclothesmen instrumental in the roundup.

FORMER DETECTIVES

Four of the six plainclothesmen are former detectives sent out to walk beats in the East End as a part of the new police policy. They are Robert E. Burke, Harry Foster, Sol Fromm and Albert Grayber. The other two were plainclothesmen Frank Scott and John Kennington.

The suspects under arrest, according to police, are Thomas Talbot, 49, of Evans City, a roomer at 280 Shady avenue; Edward Arnold, 42, also a roomer at 280 Shady avenue; William Cullen, 44, rooming in Stratford avenue; Martin Farrell, 26, of 603½ Amity street, Homestead; Lawrence O'Leary, 32, of 442 Taylor street, and Durwood O'Connell, 41, of 218 South St. Clair street. All but O'Connell have prison records, police said. O'Leary is said by police to be on parole as a member of the notorious "Blue Bandanna" gang.

FIRST ARRESTS JUNE 9

The first arrests were made June 9, when Burke and Foster, investigating a burglary, encountered Talbot and Arnold in Penn avenue, near Shady.

Recognizing him, Burke recalled that Talbot, on parole, had been ordered to keep out of the city, Burke said. In Talbot's pockets the plainclothesmen reported finding a pair of women's gloves and two wooden wedges apparently used in a burglary. Then the roundup of the other alleged members began.

Inspector Deasy said the suspects admitted breaking into safes at Anthon's Tea Room, 6007 Penn avenue; Woolworth's Five-and-Ten Cent Store, 6011 Penn avenue; The Schulte United Stores unit at 6015 Penn avenue; Sun Drug Company, 6126 Penn avenue; Armour Krause Company, 5489 Penn avenue; Lloyd Real Estate Company, 6012 Center avenue and Pure Natural Water Company, 415 Gettysburg street.

BELL TO STUDY POLICE SURVEY

Safety Director A. Marshall Bell will investigate all points of information about vice conditions furnished him by the Police Research Commission.

Appearing before that body for the first time yesterday, Director Bell later declared he was much impressed with its methods and the information disclosed by witnesses.

An immediate investigation will be made, he said, of the transfer of Inspector Jerry Deasy from Oakland to East Liberty and the reason advanced by James N. Hoey, of the commission, that it was because Deasy would not remove a policeman from duty in front of a house of ill repute in Oakland.

Inspector Deasy, according to Director Bell, has been doing "excellent work" in East Liberty.

Director Bell indicated that he will not look into matters concerning Frank R. Boyd, who recently resigned as captain of detectives.

Today

after day, for sixty-five years, Mr. Day retiring, perhaps asks himself whether it was all worth while, really different from the career of an old-fashioned street-car horse, and what good it did himself or anybody else, beyond accumulating an independence, which was probably done long ago.

A man of highest standing in business, respected by all his associates, Mr. Day retires with the good wishes of the New York business community.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT soon will be on the gentle Pacific bound for Hawaii. He can go there without leaving the country. Americans have a feeling that a President, while in office, should stay within the borders of the United States, especially since President Wilson did the other thing. He felt that Europe needed him, and it DID to the tune of ten thousand million dollars on which Europe has welched, and other tens of billions squandered by this nation's dollar-a-year patriots.

The delightful Wilson trip to visit kings and queens, genuinely glad to see him, has cost the United States the present depression, and at least a hundred thousand million dollars.

WHILE THE presidential cat is away the political mice will play. Practical Democrats and the brain trust will continue their battle. The Republican party, struggling to its feeble feet, already begins talking about "regaining fifty seats in Congress." It won't do that unless Democrats suddenly stop spending the nation's money. There is no serious sign of such a stoppage, although Secretary Ickes tells New York and several other states that he will take their "easy money" away unless they immediately begin spending it by putting people to work.

BY ORDER of the United States, the "naval talks" have been temporarily stopped in London. Why not stop them permanently, with a polite note saying:

"The United States in the future, as in the past, will build what it thinks it needs in the way of ships, submarines, airplanes and other things. It suggests that European nations do the same. We have all we can do to look after our own affairs, and a certain ten billion dollar welching of debt on the part of Europe gives us certain information that Europe's word is worth nothing. Therefore, we refuse to enter into any more agreements."

M'NAIR'S AIDES ASSAIL TOLLS

Mayor William McNair eased up a bit last night in his campaign protesting against the imposition of tolls at the Liberty Tubes.

He listened to his secretary and magistrate, Theodore L. Moritz, and Junior Secretary John Davis talk at a meeting in Prospect School, Mt. Washington.

Davis scored the newspapers and said County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern "could get taxes on land if he wanted to and wouldn't need to put tolls on the tubes." He added:

"They (the newspapers) cover up for him, but when McNair does anything constructive, the newspapers say he's crazy. If McNair is crazy, then I'm crazy."

Islam Grotto Sends Delegation to Shore

A special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad tomorrow morning will carry several hundred members of Islam Grotto to the forty-fifth annual convention of the Grotto supreme council in Atlantic City. They will return to Pittsburgh Friday. The delegation will be led by Fred C. Hopton, monarch; Otto A. Zange, chief justice; Col. William R. Dunlap, master of ceremonies; Elmer H. Maier, veiled prophet; George G. Schmidt, treasurer, and Louis H. McMahan, secretary.

MASS MEETING BACKS COUNTY PWA GRANT

South Hills Alone In Fight Against Tube Tolls

ing six of the county's bridges with new structures, Commissioner Barr arrived at the Hillsdale Avenue School with Commissioner W. D. Mansfield and several members of the commissioners' staff.

Selected as the first speaker, Barr said he believed:

"My presence here is useless because nothing can be gained or lost by this meeting."

Pleading for the proposed new bridge and tunnel to the South Side, Barr declared:

"You have got to have better service or you will stand stultified here in your growth."

FIGURES PRESENTED

He cited figures to show that the opposition to tolls was unjustified. A 40-day test of vehicles passing through the Liberty Tubes showed that only 26.5 per cent belonged in the South Hills, he said. On that basis residents of Dormont, Mt. Lebanon and other communities objecting would only pay $2,800,000 in tolls in the 19 years it would take to liquidate the federal grant, Barr urged.

He pleaded that six bridges in the county must be replaced and that in the main the county would benefit more by accepting the PWA grant under the terms laid down by the federal government, agreeing to the tolls.

The booing began during questioning by some of the 300 citizens who attended the meeting, particularly when Mrs. E. A. Schroeder, of 1531 Orangewood avenue, Beechview, arose. She demanded to know if the cost of maintaining the Allegheny County Authority and the personnel of toll collectors would be deducted from the tolls.

COST ESTIMATE DEMANDED

When Barr answered that it would, she demanded to know the cost of maintaining the personnel. The Commissioner said he could not estimate that.

Several others joined in the demands for estimates on the cost, and Barr turned angrily to one and shot back:

"All right, you answer how much it would cost."

Several chorused back:

"You answer it. We elected you commissioner."

Commissioner Mansfield declared that if there was any other way to get the federal grant other than by agreeing to place tolls on the tubes, the Commissioners would be glad to do it. Expressing doubt that it would be necessary to charge tolls for as long as 15 years, he said:

"Long before that time, existing laws could be changed so a future Board of County Commissioners could take up the remaining debt and liquidate it."

Congressman Henry Ellenbogen urged the group to settle the matter "in Allegheny County if possible by conferring with the Commissioners." If that is not possible, he promised they would get a fair hearing of their side in Washington.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Before adjourning the group authorized appointment of a committee of three to five persons to confer with the County Commissioners early next week.

At the Carnegie meeting, Attorney Clarence Nixon indorsed the Allegheny County Authority and its projects. He said:

"No legal obstacle stands in the way. The only obstacle now is political. Personally, I think tolls are abominable. Eighteen years ago Allegheny County did away with all toll bridges.

"But times have changed. When you consider the number of cars that use our bridges, why shouldn't the people who use them pay for them? Why should the man who owns a little house and never uses the bridges pay for them?"

Declaring he was surprised that Dormont and Mt. Lebanon were offering opposition to the improvement, Duff pointed out that out of the approximately $29,000,000 proposed loan and grant, the South Hills section would benefit by $14,782,000, and that $6,000,000 would be an outright grant by the government. He asserted:

"The only way we can get the money for these improvements now is by making them self-liquidating.

"We are in the very center of the heavy industries area, and all of this proposed work would directly benefit our industries.

"Twelve thousand men would be given work daily for two years.

"Sixty thousand persons will be given sustenance.

"Nobody is pleased with tolls, but when you can't get it any other way, you should take it that way."

Communities represented included the West End wards of the city, Ingram, Crafton, Carnegie, Bridgeville, Oakdale, Heidelberg, Greentree, Rosslyn Farms and Scott, Robinson, Collier and North and South Fayette townships.

Opposition to the tolls has been voted by the Civic and Welfare League of the Thirty-first Ward. In a resolution the league states in part:

"We protest any legislation tending to create a toll system through or on tunnels or bridges in Allegheny County or the City of Pittsburgh."

McArdle Scores Mayor In Tag Probe Plea

Rapping Mayor McNair for placing inefficient men in Traffic Court, Councilman P. J. McArdle today was prepared to ask Council to investigate charges of City Controller J. P. Kerr of mismanagement, inefficiency and inattention.

The Controller said there was a calendar of 18,650 cases undisposed.

Councilman McArdle said:

"We will ask our budget controller to make a survey of Traffic Court to find out why it is so far behind. I want to see if they are working in a fashion necessary to carry out the new (fixless) system. The system is all right. I think too many changes were made in the personnel in too short a period to maintain efficiency."

The Councilman said Mayor McNair had hired inexperienced men in the bureau. Magistrate Charles Papale, of Traffic Court, is now on vacation. His nephew, Frank Venture, was one of the new employes hired to displace an experienced one.

SECOND AVENUE USE AS BOULEVARD DETOUR URGED OF MOTORISTS

Special Machinery To Speed Repaving Of Allies Route

Although several detours have been suggested while the Boulevard of the Allies is closed for repairs, the City Bureau of Traffic Planning today urged motorists to make greater use of the Second avenue and Bates street route.

Use of this route, according to Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre, would relieve to a great extent some of the congestion on other detour routes, principally Forbes street and Fifth avenue, and would eliminate unnecessary traffic jams downtown.

The boulevard will be closed a maximum of 40 working days, according to terms of the state contract under which the thoroughfare is being repaved from Liberty Bridge to Seneca street.

Closing the boulevard entirely instead of keeping half of it open for one-way traffic was considered the most practical, according to Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnson, City Engineer Charles M. Reppert and Traffic Engineer McIntyre.

By keeping half the roadway open and paving only half at a time, these road experts declare, the job would have required 90 days or more to complete. Special road machinery which requires use of the entire roadway and allows the laying of full road-widths of concrete sections at a time speed up the work, these officials contend, and the public will be inconvenienced only half the time usually required.

Use of Forbes street, Fifth avenue and Second avenue is augmented by alternate routes over Bigelow boulevard, according to the Bureau of Traffic Planning, and should be ample to care for the usually heavy summer traffic.

Traffic jams Thursday and Friday, according to Traffic Engineer McIntyre, were brought about by motorists crowding into Forbes street and Fifth avenue, instead of using Bates street and the alternate Bigelow boulevard route. This congestion, he said, would be cleared just as quickly as the traffic adjusted itself to the other routes.

U. P. ASSEMBLY REJECTS UNION WITH PRESBYTERIANS

MERGER PLANS VOTED DOWN AT MEETING

Membership Growth, Debt Reduction Shown in Year

OXFORD, O., June 23.—With what seems to be a feeling of relief the seventy-sixth General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church today returned to its routine business after definitely terminating the negotiations for union with the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

The discussion which preceded the vote yesterday was spirited, but none of the speakers indulged in personalities. Dr. Guy D. Wallace, of the First Church, Braddock, speaking in favor of union, brought laughter even from the opposition when he said facetiously, "I hadn't intended to get so eloquent, but it's unavoidable on such a subject."

REID REPORT LAUDED

Dr. W. R. Sawhill, of the First Church, Seattle, a former moderator, also brought laughter in his opposition to union when he illustrated his theory that there could be Christian unity without organic unity by saying that he had lived away from his relatives all his life and still loved them and had gotten along with them better than those who lived closer to them.

There were many comments by the Commissioners on the presentation of the committee report by Dr. W. J. Reid, of Pittsburgh. The interpretation of the report by Dr. Reid consumed something over an hour and drew compliments even from the leaders of the nonunion forces.

MEMBERSHIP GAIN

The report of the committee on statistics revealed that there was a gross gain in membership of the denomination, during the year, of 144,560, as compared to 11,415 the preceding year. There was a net gain in membership of 2,359, against a net loss of 902 last year.

Routine reports will be made today. The chief interest centers in the report of the Committee on Education, which has to deal with memorials from two presbyteries asking the Assembly to investigate the "social programs and activities of the United Presbyterian College."

21 GUNS SALUTE WALES, 40

International News Service.

LONDON, June 23.—The world's best known bachelor, the Prince of Wales, observed his fortieth birthday today without excitement or ceremony.

The world at large, apparently, was more interested in the anniversary than the Prince himself. A flood of mail, cables, telegrams and telephone calls kept a corps of secretaries busy throughout the day both at York House, the Prince's London residence, and the country place where he spent most of the day.

Except to journey to Windsor Castle for lunch with King George and Queen Mary and others of the royal family, however, the Prince did not depart from his wonted routine. He spent the day quietly at Fort Belvedere, his intimate and unpretentious country residence in Berkshire and gave no indication of personal interest in the fact that he had reached the age of two-score years.

A salute of 21 guns was fired in the great park at Windsor Castle and the bells of St. George's chapel pealed out in honor of the Prince's natal day.

Wife of McKeesport Man Given Divorce

Mrs. Edna Jones Volk has been granted a divorce from Bernard J. Volk, member of a well-known McKeesport family, whom she charged with indignities.

According to the bill of complaint of the wife, Volk told her that his parents objected to the marriage and claimed that she only married him for his money. They eloped September 1, 1922.

4 Women, 15 Men Arrested in Raid

Nineteen persons, including four women, were arrested last night in a raid at 4643 Butler street. Charges of keeping a disorderly house were lodged against John Falso, 45, alleged proprietor, and Walter Pupick, 42, of 4918 Hatfield street, an employe, police said. The others were held as visitors.

Pretty Norma

NORMA MILLEN

FAMILY UNITES TO AID NORMA

DEDHAM, Mass., June 23.—(AP.)—The family of Norma Brighton Millen, split by divorce, have reunited for the common purpose of saving her from imprisonment.

Her mother, father, stepmother and brother went to the stand in Dedham Superior Court to tell the story of her early life and her subsequent marriage to Murton Millen, machine gunner who now awaits the sentence of death.

Norma, 19, slender and comely, is charged with being an accessory after the fact of two murders and the robbery of the Needham Trust Company. Murton, his brother, Irving, and Abraham Faber were convicted on June 8 of the slaying of one of the two policemen that fell in that robbery.

The trial moved swiftly and George A. Douglas, attorney for the defense, said at adjournment that Norma probably would be his next and last witness when court convenes on Monday.

The state rested yesterday after State Detective John Stokes told of the arrest and interrogation of Norma in New York.

HOLD 4 IN SALE OF 'LOCO WEED'

Four men were lodged in the county jail on District Attorney detainers in connection with the sale of marijuana cigarets in the Hill district early today.

County Detectives Walter Monaghan and Peter Connors arrested the men at Wylie avenue and Logan street after they were charged with having 150 cigarets in their possession. They said the suspects were selling them at 25 cents each.

Those held gave their names as Frank Costello and Ramon Anguiano, both of 1215 Wylie avenue, and Louie Rosso and Joseph Flores, of 1522 Wylie avenue.

Barricaded Man Hurls Defi, Caught

CAMDEN, N. J., June 23.—(AP.)—Charles Judge, 32, barricaded himself in his home, poked a shotgun out the front window and shouted:

"I'll shoot anyone who comes near!"

To police, Judge insisted he was protecting his wife. They arrested him, because his wife wasn't home.

SLAIN ROMEO'S LOVE LETTER FOUND

'Mail Order Lothario' Writes Woman He Willed Her Riches

CLARION, Pa., June 23.—John Kelly, slain matrimonial agency Romeo, intended leaving all his worldly goods to one of his mail order sweethearts, it was revealed today.

Whether he ever carried out his intention, however, will not be known until his will, believed hidden in the little white house of horrors at Fisher, near here, has been found.

A partly finished letter was found yesterday in the house—apparently written by a "hired man" at the dictation of the farmer Romeo to Miss Lena Harmon, 438 West Fifty-third street, New York.

WOOER ILL

Kelly, according to the letter, was sick at the time. The letter states the doctors had told him he could not get well.

The missive reads:

"He keeps asking for you. I am the man that lives on John's farm.

"He made a will and left everything to you. Why didn't you stay with him a little longer? This would never have happened. He thought your friendship was the only friendship in the world and I know you will never have a friend like him again."

The letter stated Kelly had "$5,750 on interest" and "$724.82 on checking account."

Kelly, according to his neighbors, had "dozens of sweethearts" visit him at his farm during the past few years. He advertised in a matrimonial agency paper for girls "from 16 to 30 with marriage in view."

ACCUSED GIRL IN JAIL

Leona Menser, 20, of Coshocton, O., held in the Clarion County Jail charged with the killing, was visited by her mother, sister and brother yesterday. She told her mother:

"I didn't go for to kill him. I only wanted to keep him from hitting me when I asked for my clothes to go back home."

Leona said she stayed at the farm two weeks on Kelly's promise to marry her, but he finally told her:

"I never marry them. I've had dozens of girls here."

HIT-RUN DRIVER HURTS MAN

Struck by a hit-and-run driver near the North Side Police Station, Charles Klesser, 58, of 3338 East street, is in Allegheny General Hospital with fractures of the skull and ribs.

Clifford Garrett, 4, of 526 Shore avenue, suffered lacerations and bruises when he was struck by an automobile near his home last night.

Mary Morgan, 33, of 2022 Plainview avenue, a daughter of Homicide Detective Frank Morgan, whose son died last week, was injured about the knee and jaw when she was struck by an automobile at Fifth and Grant street.

John Plank, 38, of 7373 Lemington avenue, suffered a probable skull fracture at midnight when an automobile driven by Louis Boettner, 28, of 303 Forty-fifth street and in which he was a passenger, collided with a North Side-Carrick trolley discharging passengers at Nineteenth and Carson streets, police reported.

Punch Death Laid To Jealous Husband

CINCINNATI, June 23.—(AP.)—Police today charged Howard Mays, 37, with killing with a blow of his fist a man he accused of being too friendly with Mrs. Mays. Charles Gass, 37, fell dead at the feet of Mays' wife.

Male 'Plot' to Pull Fast One at Women's Race Subjects 'Petticoat Pilots' to Odd Examination

MISS HELEN RICHEY . . 'POWDER YOUR NOSE'

Powder Nose, Smile, Sing, Among Tests Facing Entries

"Powder your nose."

"Sing a few bars from a popular song."

"Now smile."

That's the unusual examination that awaits attractive Miss Helen Richey, McKeesport's famous endurance flier, and Miss Helen MacCloskey, Pittsburgh's flying society girl and other "petticoat pilots" Sunday at Roosevelt Field, Long Island.

They will be given orders like the above before they take their places at the starting line in the third Annette Gipson all-women air race. Besides they will have to pose for a board of eagle-eyed committee members.

The reason said Miss Richey:

"Miss Gipson has heard rumors to the effect that at least one of the pilots will be in woman's clothing — wig, jodphurs, lipstick and everything. The pilots, denied entry in the race, have vowed to enter by hook or crook."

Any entrant who passes the examination will be considered a full-fledged feminine pilot and allowed to compete for the $850 in prizes. Miss Richey and Miss MacCloskey were early entrants in the race, over a 30-mile course of three laps.

They are both in New York today tuning up their motors for the event.

Tagless Car Hits Tree, Driver Held

John Zollock, 36, of 19 Cohutta street, faced a hearing in Traffic Court today after his automobile skidded in Perrysville avenue and hit a pole and tree. Police said Zollock's machine bore no license plates.

WIDOW'S ASHES IN COURT

International News Service.

YAKIMA, Wash., June 23.—A small silver casket urn supposedly containing the ashes of Mrs. Sarah E. Smith-Scollard, wealthy Seattle eccentric, held the center of interest today in the $5,000,000 suit brought by the guardians of the Scollard estate against the estate of Reese B. Brown, wealthy Yakima rancher.

Mrs. Brown, widow of the rancher, introduced the small urn into Superior Court here yesterday.

Inscriptions on the urn and a certificate signed by Canadian authorities state that Mrs. Scollard died in Montreal, Quebec, July 24, 1932, and that her remains were cremated there. Mrs. Brown petitioned for permission to bury the ashes in the city mausoleum.

The suit of guardians of the Scollard estate against that of Reese Brown charges misappropriation of Mrs. Scollard's money while she was mentally incompetent. Attorneys for the Scollard estate were denied a petition to continue hearings pending an investigation of the claims of Mrs. Brown concerning the urn.

NOTE OF DEATH IN LAUNCH

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP.)—An abandoned, 22-foot launch was found by marine police off Annadale, Staten Island, shortly after midnight.

On a table in the cabin was a note which read:

"Please notify my sister. I have anchored my body well off shore. No use dragging."

The note was signed by "W. B. Parkhurst."

Also found were a wallet containing money and papers, and a revolver with three empty chambers.

100 See Killer Executed In New Gas Death Tank

Kelley Chants Psalm In Glare of Spot, Gasps and Dies

CANON CITY, Col., June 23.—(AP.)—An obscure grave on "Woodpecker Hill" at the Colorado Penitentiary awaited today the body of William Cody Kelley, who paid with his life in the prison's new lethal gas chamber last night for killing a rancher to steal two cheap pistols.

Warden Roy Best said:

"The execution was successful. There were no hitches. Kelley was put to death speedily and the apparatus worked even better than it did in experiments with animals."

While about 100 persons watched, Kelley walked into the death house, disrobed of all but shoes and "shorts"—to keep his clothing from absorbing any of the death-dealing gas fumes. Wearing a black mask, he was strapped to the "death throne."

The doors of the tank were closed. Kelley chanted the Twenty-third Psalm. A brilliant light shone upon him.

The witnesses stared through long rows of windows at the prisoner. Guards released 12 acid capsules—costing 90 cents—into a crock under the "death throne."

Whitish fumes rose as the capsules struck a mixture of acid and water. The prisoner slumped forward, gasped two or three times, and was still.

Twenty-five physicians held an autopsy to observe the effect of the gas in the hope of preventing deaths in mine disasters. There was no cutting out of the victim's heart, as was done after executions under the state's old system of hanging, to make sure of death.

Kelley, sentenced for the slaying of Russell Browning, wealthy Delta, Col., rancher-recluse, protested his innocence to the last.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

What's this I read in the paper today about Barney Baruch quitting Wall street and starting writing. That's what I call leaving a business when you are at the top. He knew more about it (and everything else) than anybody. But just think of the novelty of a man being in the writing game that knows what he is talking about.

Will Rogers

Say, we are holding the American Olympic games here today. Every great runner and jumper are here. Nearly every state has sent one or more great athletes, yet in the big games that's held in Washington every year, not a single state seems to be able to send a statesman.

Speed Plans to Complete Hospital

Officials of Allegheny General Hospital today were taking steps to hasten completion of the new hospital buiding, following a threat of Public Works Administration officials to withdraw a $2,000,000 loan granted the institution several months ago unless work is started within a short time. Final legal papers are now being drawn up, H. V. Blaxter, counsel, said, adding that work will start as soon as the plans are worked out.

About 375 men will be employed on the project, it was said.

SOLES MARRIES ROSE HARDY

Atlantic City, where Mrs. Emma Soles, 77, has been resting for several weeks, and told her about the wedding.

Minnie Buchwalz, Soles' secretary, said:

"Mrs. Soles was very happy about it and she gave them her blessing."

Minnie, who was also a witness at the murder trial, was bridesmaid for the newlyweds and Hiram "Hum" Roessing, Minnie's good friend, was best man.

Minnie described the wedding thusly:

"Rose felt fine and Bob was in a good humor. It was a fine wedding."

PEARLS AND DIAMONDS

At the ceremony the bride wore a pear-shape diamond engagement ring, a platinum wedding ring and a string of pearls that had been given to her by her mother, now dead.

The bride is possibly one year older than Soles, who is 42. She is often noted for her resemblance to Mary Pickford. She is a daughter of the late Dave Hardy, who was one of McKeesport's most prominent politicians.

The marriage occurred just about one year after LaRoux Soles' death—death from a bullet wound below the heart which a jury agreed had not been inflicted by the well-to-do McKeesporter.

The newlyweds did not leave on a honeymoon immediately, planning to take an extended trip later.

For the time being they will make their home in the spacious, well-furnished home in Jenny Lind street, where Bob Soles testified he found LaRoux Soles in bed, dying, and a suicide note near the bed.

Later, however, if the 9-room house is sold, the couple will establish another home.

50-MILE WIND SWEEPS CITY, LOSS HEAVY

Lightning Bolt Hits Foundry, Homes Damaged

3620 Minstrood street, attached to Engine Company No. 33, suffered a laceration on the chin when he was struck by a ladder which he was placing on the truck. Moran was among the firemen who dug through the storm-wrecked foundry. He was treated at Mercy Hospital and returned to duty.

John A. Lathwood, owner of the damaged building, estimated the damage at $25,000.

SIGNBOARD COLLAPSES

A huge signboard atop a building in Webster avenue, near Sixth avenue, was blown into the street, narrowly missing an automobile in which several persons were riding.

A shower of brick and stone fell into Fairmont street when lightning struck the top of a three-story rooming house of Mrs. Pearl Wolfe, at 400 Penn avenue. Roomers in the house were stunned by the bolt.

Extra emergency crews of the city and utility companies were summoned to repair the wires that fell to the street and clear the streets of the trees and limbs and other debris that paralyzed traffic in virtually every section of the city and county. Streets were inundated by the torrential rain that accompanied the wind and lightning.

The metal sheeting on the roof of the home of Stephen Locher, 107 Daisy street, North Side, was torn off by the wind, which carried it onto the electric wires in front of the home of James J. Conley, 110 Daisy street. Homes in the district were thrown into darkness when the sheeting tore down the wires.

Two huge windows in the Finley clothing store at 328 Oliver avenue were broken. Damage was placed at $300.

TREE INJURES GIRL

Anna Bayko, of 1618 Locust street, was cut on the hand when struck by a falling tree in front of her home. It was reported.

Part of the pavement at Fisk and California avenues, Avalon, was torn up when a large tree was uprooted.

Trees were reported blown down at Steuben and Herchel streets, in Perrysville and California avenues, Mary avenue and Alder street, Franklin and Pitts streets, Wilkinsburg, the 5800 block Penn avenue, 1400 block Sheffield street, Amberson avenue, near Castleman and at Frankstown avenue and Hale street.

Lightning struck the chimney of Magee Hospital. Hospital authorities reported that no one was injured. The home of O. C. Burger, 6367 Monitor street, also was struck by lightning.

The roof of H. F. Irwin's garage in Klein road, Ross Township, was reported ripped off by the wind.

Bergt. Edward Gibbens was stunned while sitting in the South Side Police Station when lightning struck a burglar alarm of a South Side bank.

The wind lifted a large porch from the Minnetonka Club, Verona, and sank a small river cruiser anchored near the club.

STATE SWEPT BY STORM

Associated Press.

Summer's first thunderstorm lashed Pennsylvania with heavy rain, hail and wind that damaged crops and property but waylaid the young season's initial heat wave.

Hailstones an inch and a half in diameter shattered greenhouse windows, shredded young tobacco in the fields, and loosened plaster which stopped looms in a silk mill in Lancaster County. Three barns were fired in Dauphin County for a total loss of $15,000.

Philadelphia enjoyed the 21-degree temperature drop but the storm unroofed four houses in the western part of the city, weakened a double brick structure in South Philadelphia to the point of collapse, and rent the steeple of the Scots Presbyterian Church. Edwin T. Morris, 61, fell dead from the heat before the rain.

Johnstown was darkened for a half-hour when the lighting system failed.

Sterilized Father of 3 Sues Doctor, Loses

International News Service.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 23.—Living happily with his wife and three children, Clarence H. Christensen today philosophically defended his action in undergoing a sterilization operation, the basis for a damage suit after the surgery proved unsuccessful.

The strange operation and resultant suit for damages was revealed when the Minnesota Supreme Court ruled against Christensen in his action for $5,000 against the late Dr. H. J. Thornby, of Moorhead, Minn.

Christensen, an insurance adjuster, sued when the operation failed to accomplish its purpose. He sought damages because of expenses incurred by the birth which he said he was told could not occur.

It was a fear that child birth might prove fatal to his wife that prompted him to undergo the operation, Christensen said at his home.

Mrs. Christensen, he said, became seriously ill following the birth of their second child, and rather than imperil her he decided on the operation. He said:

"My wife was in no condition to become a mother again. I sought the physician's advice and decided to undergo the operation when it was explained such an operation on my wife would prove painful and costly."

As to the last child, now about 2 years old, Christensen said he "wouldn't take a million dollars for him." The mother said the same.

Congressmen Back Home Find Folks Have Forgotten 'Em

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Lot of congressmen got home today and found the town folks had forgotten them.

There was no fatted calf. So they all took bologna.

However, when the boys started talking everybody remembered them. They had heard those speeches before.

If a politician bogs down in his speech, his home folks can finish it for him. They've heard it hundreds of times and know it by heart.

They can run it through from start to finish. They can start at the finish and go to the other direction. Or they can start in the middle and work both ways.

So it looks like all congressmen will again be elected this fall on their winning campaign talks of 1932. There never was any depression in promises.

MT. LEBANON U. P. CHURCH PLANS TRIBUTE FOR PASTOR

DR. E. C. M'COWN IN MINISTRY 30 YEARS

The Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church has arranged a celebration in honor of the thirtieth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. E. C. McCown.

Dr. McCown will deliver an anniversary sermon tomorrow morning. The Temple Choir will sing Dr. Clarence Dickinson's festival anthem, "Great and Glorious is the Name of the Lord."

Membership of the Mt. Lebanon Church during Dr. McCown's pastorate has increased from 178 to more than 2,500.

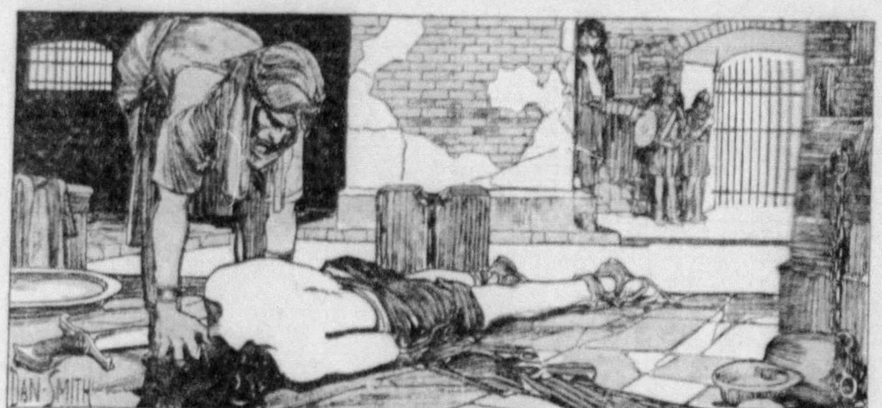
The Story of Salome — CHAPTER IV

Told in Pictures By DANE SMITH

Then Salome, as her mother Herodias bade her to do, returned to Herod and said, "I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist."

And when he heard this Herod was exceeding sorry, for he knew John the Baptist was a just man; yet, for the sake of the oath hee made he would not deny her.



Thus it came about that in order to gratify the vengefulness of Herodias, angry because John the Baptist told Herod it was not lawful that he take her as his wife when she was his brother Philip's wife, the king gave command to his executioner, who went and beheaded John the Baptist in the prison.

GREAT BRITAIN FORGETS DEPRESSION

(Editor's Note — Businessmen in Great Britain have forgotten there was a depression, H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service foreign correspondent, writes in the concluding article of his series on British recovery.

Great Britain, he says, is really coming back and has but a short distance to go before achieving the 1929 level.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

LONDON, June 23.—Britain is really coming back, and she is leading the world in the race for recovery of real prosperity. This is the conclusion after an examination of her economic body from the stock exchange to coal mines and from the slums of Whitechapel to the clubs of Mayfair.

No other country in the world can parallel the record approach of Britain toward the pre-crisis level of economic well-being. America has climbed faster, perhaps, from the depth of her unparalleled depression, but America has much farther to go.

Britain's tariff helped her recovery. Depreciation of the pound helped it. Aside from these measures the ordinary forces of capitalist economy have done the job.

Britain's record is not 100 per cent favorable, but the credits so far outbalance the debits that her profit is fatter than any other country's.

Confidence has returned. The basis of enterprise has been reestablished. Two years ago the most courageous businessmen took the lead and by now conditions have been established which give courage to the timidest.

PEOPLE AT WORK

These conditions are first, the remarkable fact that the number of people at work in industry today is within 33,000 of the number at work in 1929, the greatest number in Britain's history. She had 10,220,000 at work in 1929 and in May, 1934, had 10,187,000 at work.

Second, the equally remarkable fact that Britain is doing today virtually as much business as she did in 1929. The comprehensive index of business activity of the economist based on employment, imports, exports, shipping, rail traffic, postal receipts, building activity, consumption of cotton, coal and electricity, bank clearings and automobile registration shows British business, at 100 in 1924, reached 110 in 1929, fell to 93 in 1931 and has today climbed back to 109.

Britain has balanced her budget, reduced her income tax and restored the 10 per cent cuts in the dole. Her wealthy have to pay less, and her poor receive more. At the same time the unemployment insurance fund has for the first time made a payment to the government on its debt for money borrowed to pay the dole. Decreased unemployment permitted a payment of $20,000,000 and it is estimated that if all goes well the debt will be cleared in 35 years.

Britain has three major debits.

First, she still has 2,090,000 registered unemployed, and, although this figure is constantly falling and is lower than at any time since 1930, it is still 700,000 higher than in 1929, and 16.2 per cent of insured workers in all industries are still jobless.

Furthermore, her unemployment has never since the war fallen below 1,000,000. This least happy fact correlates with the second major debit.

The second debit is that Britain normally has to export and sell abroad 30 per cent of her products (compared to America's 8 per cent), and her exports although up 9 per cent this spring compared to 1933, are still down 50 per cent compared to 1924, and 30 per cent compared to 1913. The loss since 1913 is around one billion dollars a year.

LIMIT TO UPTURN

Third and last debit is the fact that there seems to be an automatic limit to the present movement upward. It has taken place behind the

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Notes From a New Yorker in California

The lawsuit against Eddie Cantor by a humor magazine will be more amusing than either party's jokes in court . . . The magazine seeks damages of $25,000 from the comedian, alleging that on a radio broadcast he used one of their paid articles—which dealt with two dogs having a conversation . . . Imagine then—the crimson cheeks on the plaintiffs, and on their counsellor in court—when Cantor's attorneys bring out a book of verse written by Robert Burns (decades and decades ago) in which Burns scrivened almost an identical conversation between two hounds!

Mae West's forthcoming passion play, "It Ain't No Sin," has been frowned upon by the N. Y. State Censor Board, already . . . The title of the flicker probably will be altered for New York . . . There appears to be a lot of to-doodle over the title to Cantor's next Goldwyn picture, tentatively tagged: "Kid Millions" . . . A contagious title, if you asked me, but there are some in the United Artists group opposed to it . . . "Kid Boots" meant what? . . . Yet, it was a box-office come-on . . . The word "millions" will never be unpopular—but producers are dopes . . . The picture featuring Cantor will show him a poor youth who winds up being hailed as the legitimate heir to a sheik's fortune, etc. . . . So out here they are fussing around with punny titles such as: "Wm. Shelkspeare," and other nothings.

Among other items to cheer about is that Barbara Pepper of the Broadway ensembles, is now playing second leads in King Vidor's epics . . . Her mother and father (a former New York newspaperman) are with her—proving that a young lady can succeed in theatricals even with her kin around . . . As the champion booster for "She Loves Me Not" (I hailed it as the funniest show in town) I have more right to judge the film version of it . . . The show is a laugh riot from start to end . . . The picture isn't . . . And one stupid bit of direction is most aggravating . . . Somewhere in it the dean's daughter is told by Bing Crosby: "Here's a new song I just wrote," and he plays it . . . She immediately joins in the chorus—without looking at the wordage!

The Herbert Marshall-Gloria Swanson matter has not wilted, as the legend had it recently . . . On a specially hired yacht they week-end off Santa Catalina Island, a few hours from Los Angeles—and Miss Swanson wears dark glasses to disguise herself when she goes for a stroll on the isle . . . Paulette Goddard and Charles Chaplin are weekly visitors . . . Santa Catalina, christened after St. Catherinee, has no curfew laws . . . Childs, frinstance, is an all-night rendezvous featuring a floor show! . . . The city of Avalon, its leading burg, inspired the famous sang, "I Lost my Heart in Avalon" . . . Wrigley's son, the owner of the island, has altered matters so that Catalina is a lively spot . . . A million dollar ballroom accommodates 3,000 dancers—and there are only 1,800 residents in the town! . . . The leading hotel, (named after the Saint) is one of the finer places, located in the harbor and surrounded by numerous sailboats, sloops, yachts, etc. . . . Reminding the visitor of those continental places you see on picture postcards.

Mae Clark, the actress, is readying a magazine article in defense of her late friend, Dr. Wagner, killed with Dorothy Dell in that car crash . . . She will point out, she says, that Dorothy was found pinned under the wheel—therefore she must have been driving at the time . . . And that Wagner's body was thrown several feet, etc. . . . Yet, her intimates tell you that Miss Dell's pet aversion was speeding . . . The local gendarmes point with pride to their system of making visiting criminals unhappy . . . First, they are arrested on suspicion for anything . . . Even with their lawyer's writ for freedom—they cannot be released for at least 72 hours . . . So with the release—the arrested person is resurrested on another charge of vagrancy or "looking at anybody with a gleam in his eye"—and whisked off to another housegow . . . Before the man's attorney can be notified—he's been in a second jail two days or more—and then 72 hours later may be released on the writ gag . . . The same procedure is worked until the person is fed up with the law—and begs permission to leave town . . . This is all Burton Fitts, the District Attorney, is waiting for, and the man is permitted to go, after promising never to return.

The good news from Manhattan is that the Hollywood spot featuring Helen Kane is clicking big . . . And that Miss Kane has licked the legend "they never come back" . . . And that Billy Rose's Music Hall has all the earmarks of another huge success, for which hurray! . . . Broadway needs it . . . Naturally it pleases a guy to hear that at the opening there is to be a table reserved for Rose's major orchid-thrower . . . And that no matter how jammed the place that night, the table will not be sold, etc. . . . Pardon my getting mentilsenal . . . Trueman Tally's crack might have stopped the big fight. He yelled, "Hey, Max! You're wanted in Thalberg's office!" . . . In the last mayoralty race in New York, the records show that Al Smith got three votes . . . Mussolini, Walker, Carnera and what columnist (?) one each.

The power of the word often works out well . . . The exclusive Oyster Harbor Club colony on Cape Cod, frinstance, wires that after reading the report here on one town's signs, to wit: "Drive slowly, we love our children"—the same signs have been placed at the club entrance and all driveways in the vicinity of Osterville, Mass. . . . And that parents there expressed their delight over the suggestion . . . What Chamber of Commerce will be next to follow the example? . . . Li'l make it national! . . . The morning mail also brings another letter from the Department of Interior . . . Expressing regret for the "tone of the first letter" (regarding the scallions thrown at it for annulling the marriage of the rich old Indian, Jackson Barnett, etc.) . . . The newspapers, it adds, were not acquainted with the full facts . . . "We have excellent reason to believe," continues the letter "that the old fellow would have lived to the end of his days in far more contentment had he been allowed to live on his own place with his horses" . . . All of which amuses me—for Barnett lived 92 years—and his horses can't cook, among other things.

Child Leads Them in Penn

By KARL KRUG

There was something closely akin to a small riot in the Penn yesterday afternoon as "Little Miss Marker," latest of the Damon Runyon Broadway stories to reach the talking screen, got away to what is generally described as a flying start in Pittsburgh.

Especially was that audience vociferous in its approval of Shirley Temple, the dimpled and ingratiating little siren of five years, who plays the title role in this colorful, human and sentimental entertainment. "Little Miss Marker" is one of those pictures which showmen call "audience" and the spontaneous outbursts of handclapping that greeted the film on its premiere in this town proves their contention.

Here is a capital film story that stands on its own feet from first to last without any undue attempt to play on the sympathies. Filled with sentiment, it is a human interest yarn that builds steadily and surely to a climax of natural suspense. Peopled with those hard-boiled characters that Runyon writes about so handily, it depends solely on what little Shirley does to the hearts of race track touts and big-shot gamblers, among whom she has been cast, for its touching appeal.

Not since Jackie Cooper broke through in "Skippy" has there been as good a juvenile performance as Shirley Temple gives in "Little Miss Marker." The youngster is amazingly natural, and handles several "big" sequences in a manner eminently satisfactory to the most exacting. She can cry as well as she can laugh, and her transition from a tot who believes in the legend of King Arthur and his knights of the Round Table to a place where she says "nuts" when the subject is mentioned is an utter delight to the eye and a pleasure to the ear.

Left as security for a $20 bet by her father, who later commits suicide, Shirley is taken in charge by "Sorrowful" Jones, racetrack bookmaker, the finest role Adolphe Menjou has had since his Walter Burns of "Front Page." As a tight-fisted, shabby, crabby denizen of Broadway, Menjou's portrayal is one of real power and consistency, and his gradual devotion to the little girl who has so suddenly entered his life is a beautiful thing to watch.

Sometimes reminiscent of "The Champ," in which Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper tugged at your heartstrings, "Little Miss Marker" offers one scene between Menjou and Shirley that tops anything that other fine picture had to offer. This is where Menjou teaches the little girl to pray, and she ends her simple appeal with, "an' please, God, bring Sorrowful a new suit." Another is the song she sings with the late Dorothy Dell, filling the role of Bangles, night club torch songstress. Next to Menjou and little Miss Temple, Lynne Overman, as Regret the horse player, one of Mr. Runyon's favorite characters, stands out in an excellent cast.

Through the barrage of flippant wisecracks and racetrack lingo, runs an underlying vein of Runyon plotting at its best, and if you don't think that just such a story as he tells in "Little Miss Marker" could happen on that strange street known as Broadway, then you have plenty to learn about the Great Night Way.

The picture reaches its real punch when the hard crowd that has adopted Shirley realizes that her childish faith in King Arthur must be restored. They stage a masquerade in a night club for her benefit, all appearing as the various knights of the Round Table, a sequence of many laughs and a few tears. While the episode almost brings the tale to a tragic close, everything makes for a happy ending, and rightly.

An excellent companion piece to the screen feature is Duke Ellington's zippy barrage of jazz music and hot hoofing on the stage. The Duke lays down several fast and furious jungle throwbacks, including one based on the second Hungarian Rhapsody, and for dancing on the sensational flash order the Miller brothers are recommended.

Ivie Anderson slithered about as she warbled "Give Me a Man Like That" and "It Don't Mean a Thing If It Ain't Got That Swing" in real Harlem tempo, and the rubber-bodied "Snake-Hips" Tucker went over to a howling personal triumph in a dance routine that resembled a cross between a can-can and a rhumba.

Outing Planned By Variety

An outing under the auspices of the Variety Club will be held in Dravo Park, Neville Island, Sunday, July 1. The affair will be a basket picnic and attendance is not being limited to Variety Club members only. All are invited to attend, and there is expected to be an influx of amusement men, especially, from many parts of the Tri-State district. There will be athletic contests, swimming and dancing, and a big show is being arranged for the evening feature.

Preparations for the affair are in charge of Dr. M. R. Goldman, general chairman, and heads of committees include John H. Harris, Joe Feldman, Mike Cullen, Art Levy, Bert Stearn, John Maloney, J. Misrach, R. Rosuali, Dr. L. Beinhaur, John Hooley, Clare Meeder and John Morin.

Fight Film Booked For Family

Beginning Monday, the Harris Family Theater will offer the official motion pictures of the Baer-Carnera championship prize fight as an extra attraction with "Beggars in Ermine," the regular feature. This will be the first showing of the fight films in the East End.

All in a Day

Grins and Bitters

I'M GOING back a long way for this one, but my seven readers are accustomed to that anyhow. Back in 1930, Billy Rose had a show called "Sweet and Low" which he kept on the road under another title for several weeks before bringing it into New York. The stars were Fannie Brice, who is Billy's wife; George Jessel and James Barton.

"Sweet and Low" finally reached Newark, and Rose decided that he needed an added feature to pep the production. He settled upon Borrah Minnevitch and his harmonica gang, and arranged to have them open with the show in Newark that night.

The one hitch in the proceedings was the fact that Minnevitch's outfit was playing the Paradise Theater in the Bronx that very week, and the Paradise Theater is just about as close to Newark as Newark is to Paradise. But Minnevitch promised to make the best speed possible, and to arrive at "Sweet and Low" in time to appear.

Borrah did make excellent time in racing to Newark with his troupe, but he barely made the connection. The Minnevitch outfit reached the wings just as Fannie, Jessel and Barton were going into the finale.

Jessel spotted them and halted the proceedings. He introduced Borrah as a great added attraction and then left the stage with his two co-stars.

When it was over, Fannie, Jessel and Barton stepped out to introduce the finale all over again. But Minnevitch had scored one of his sensational hits. The audience liked him—and it felt, too, that it was getting something for nothing. So the three stars had to retire again while the harmonica wizard staged an encore.

Had this happened only once, it would have been okay. But it happened four times! The audience demanded encore after encore, and Fannie, George and Jim walked themselves dizzy before Minnevitch left the stage and they were able to go into their finale.

Some thirty minutes later, Jessel sat in Fannie's dressing room. He was rather glum about the situation, but Fannie didn't mind. After all, it was strictly for the good of the show.

"Come on, George," said the grand comedienne. "Snap out of it. Maybe you need a drink. How about a little straight rye?"

"All right," replied Jessel gravely. "I'll take it."

Fannie poured the drink and handed it to George.

"What do you want for a chaser?" she asked.

"A chaser?" groaned Jessel. "Give me Minnevitch!" . . .

SPEAKING of James Barton reminds me of the fact that he was this week the center of a highly interesting experiment in the theater. He took over the meaty role of Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road," replacing Henry Hull, who had been starred in the piece since it opened.

It was a dangerous task for Jim to undertake because Hull's performance had been regarded by virtually all the critics as one of the greatest of any year. And while Barton's dramatic ability has been recognized by show people for years, the public wanted him only as a comic.

But Hull went to Hollywood and Jim was handed his talk-of-the-town role through a stroke of casting genius. Barton opened Monday night, and his work was little short of sensational. His performance is being hailed as every bit as good as Hull's—and there are some who claim that, in spots, he is better!

All of which proves that Barton is a great artist. And it also proves that it doesn't pay to consider yourself too big in this world—because they'll always dig up somebody who's just a little bigger. . .

A WEALTHY clothing magnate, reports Howard Snyder, found out that his wife was a nudist and decided to divorce her.

He went to an agency that made a specialty of such cases and placed the matter in their hands. The detectives trailed the disciple of Lady Godiva for more than six months—but it was all in vain.

They just couldn't get anything on her! . . .

* * *

YOU'LL find it difficult to believe, but I happen to know that it is definitely true. Back in 1930, a wealthy real estate man lent a friend $30,000 to tide the latter gentleman over a rough spot. His money, he felt, would be returned in a few months.

But time rolled by, and the dough failed to appear. The other afternoon, when he was pressed for cash, the real estator phoned his friend.

"I hate to ask you, Joe," he said, "but I really need money very badly. I've never asked you for any part of that $30,000, but I must do it now. Can you let me have some of it immediately?"

"All right," replied the other man. "I know you wouldn't ask if you didn't need it. Send your secretary over and I'll give her a payment right away."

So over went the secretary to collect a portion of the $30,000 on account. And what do you suppose she was handed? Five dollars! . . .

ONE of Chick Endor's famous drunk stories has to do with the stew who fell into a barber chair and demanded a shave. His head was almost in his lap, however, and the barber couldn't apply the lather.

"Gimme a shave," grunted the stew.

The barber attempted to raise the man's head. But no sooner did he get it up than down it went again.

"Come on, come on," demanded the stew. "Gimme a shave."

"But I can't shave you that way, sir," cried the barber. "Your head is facing downward."

"All right," hiccoughed the drunk without moving. "Gimme a haircut!" . . .

Guy, Gracie, George in Stanley

By MICHAEL SHAW

Burns and Allen and Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians, for so long a favorite radio program, are united on the screen in "Many Happy Returns," the Stanley's new attraction.

Gracie Allen is in the spotlight all the way through, and if you like her particular brand of nitwit humor, this is an item not to be missed. And even if you have wearied of her on the air, you'll probably like the picture anyhow. We expected to be bored, and instead found the whole thing an immense lot of fun.

The story is entirely too cockeyed to lend itself to retelling here. Suffice it to say that at various times we witness Gracie tearing down her father's department store to provide room for a bird sanctuary; Gracie being psychoanalyzed; Gracie as the bride of the unwilling George Burns; Gracie in an upper berth, keeping the whole car awake; and Gracie masquerading as a movie contest winner and bringing a Hollywood studio to the verge of ruin and wholesale nervous breakdowns.

The gags are assorted, those of them are clever, and we suspect these are the ones provided by J. P. McEvoy. Some are moss-grown, like Gracie's question about psychoanalysis: "Does it leave a scar?" But most are the kind which Burns and Allen have made peculiarly their own, and, strangely enough, they do not pall when spread through an entire movie.

Gracie is assisted principally by Mr. Burns and by George Barbier, a couple of pleasing vaudeville turns, and the Lombardos. The band plays a handful of numbers in typical Lombardo style, and probably you like that style; most people do. As for us, we'll string along with the late Ring Lardner, who once sent Guy an open letter, pleading with him to have the bandsmen tune up some time and play a piece through all in the same key.

We nearly forgot to mention some swell interpolated dances by Veloz and Yolanda. ("Oh, they weren't at the World's Fair," says Gracie. "Where are their fans?") And there's an amusing fadeout that will send you home chuckling. "Many Happy Returns" is, in short, very pleasant screen fare.

The shorts include a rib-tickling edition of "Screen Souvenirs," a newsreel with some remarkable shots of the latest Cuban massacre, a cartoon comedy and a travelogue of the Chicago fair.

Hypnotist Villain In Regent

"The Love Captive," strange story of a rascally physician who wields a deadly hypnotic power over his patients, is one of the new pictures in the Regent. The leads are portrayed by Nils Asther, as the doctor, and Gloria Stuart, as a nurse. Others in the cast are Paul Kelly, Alan Dinehart, John Wray and Russ Brown. The picture, adapted from Max Marcin's Broadway play, "The Humbug," was directed by Marcin himself, who has given it the crafty cunning he had in mind when he first conceived the idea of a handsome hypnotist as the leading character of a story. The second feature in the Regent is "Let's Talk It Over," comedy-drama co-starring Chester Morris and Mae Clark.

Ernst, Josef Make Up at Party

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 23—Hello! Jeanette MacDonald's Sunday afternoon cocktail party for Robert Ritchie accomplished several other interesting things aside from being one of Hollywood's gayest affairs at which the movie village practically attended en masse.

Ernest Lubitsch and Josef von Sternberg made up! Many pairs of startled eyes assumed wider than WIDE expressions when the two famous directors met face to face—for the first time since they had started saying snippy things about the other; cracks that landed on the front pages of the nation's newspapers.

It was a tense moment when the pair stared at each other. There was a twinkle in Josef's eye, while a subtle smile played about Ernst's thick lips. And then they rushed into each other's arms! The amazed group heaved a big sigh as Josef and Ernst, arm-in-arm, maneuvered to a secluded corner, both laughing and chattering, sometimes lapsing into German in order to hide the real low-down of their conversation from snoop columnists.

When questioned, Lubitsch said:

"I like Von Sternberg—when we are both in the same country."

Von Sternberg quickly replied:

"What makes you think I like it—you liking me? Even my best friends don't like me!"

But, at any rate, Joe and Ernst have called a truce—until the next time.

At last, Edgar (Slow-Burn) Kennedy, star of countless two-reel "Mr. Average Man" comedies for RO, is getting a real break—a chance to really display his stellar talents in a pair of feature-length flickers.

A deal was completed whereby Edgar will top-spot it with Robert Armstrong and William Cagney in "Flirting With Danger" and "Reckless Romeos," for Monogram Pictures. During Treva Carr's illness, Robert Welsh will supervise.

* * *

Romantic Notes—Ernst Lubitsch whose cupid-capers reputedly cost him a pretty penny some weeks ago, is in constant attendance to Shiela Manners . . . Gloria Shea, once almost rated social top-notchery when she had the scion of some telegraph millions after her, being seen with Bob Steele, a horse-opera star. She's his leading woman—at his request.

* * *

Down Moviedom's Gabby Lanes—The reports are conflicting, but here's the real low-down on the Mae Clarke BOW OUT of the "Four Walls" cast. Incidentally, Gladys George replaces her. Anyway, Mae's medico wants her to rest in a local hospital for about five days—and Mae didn't want to give up her role in "The Captain Hates the Sea" for Columbia, so she ducked the M-G-M flicker . . . Eddie Conrad, the original "I've got a new finish for the act" headshaker vaudeville, gets a movie break in "Done in Oil," the new Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly giggle-getter for Hal Roach.

A floor show with the socialite spectators four-deep and standing on chairs for a better view; a "snack room" for the late diners; a benefit shop with innumerable intriguing things for sale, were only a few of the entertaining features at the benefit for the West Penn Hospital at the Fox Chapel Golf Club last night.

There was an immense crowd there; tables had been placed even in the attractive patio. The benefit was sponsored by the women's committee and the junior committee of the hospital.

I noticed that organdie was the reigning favorite, especially brown.

At one of the tables earlier in the evening I saw the John W. Lawrences, the Herbert A. Mays, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, Mrs. F. C. Irish and Mrs. Lyle Nelson and Mrs. Thomas Scott, of New York. Mrs. Lawrence was wearing brown tulle; Mrs. May chose delicate delphinium blue chiffon with a cape featuring many tiny tucks corresponding with the tucked skirt; Mrs. Patterson wore blue brocaded white satin; Mrs. Irish, flowered chiffon, and Mrs. Nelson's frock was of black dotted white organdie.

Althea Robinson Wears Smart Frock Of Yellow Chiffon With Pleated Cape

A particularly smart frock was that of Althea Robinson, yellow chiffon with a pleated cape forming brief sleeves. Black and white checked organdie was the choice of blonde Collie Jennings and brown organdie that of Dorothy Keller, one of the aides. Her frock had a ruffled cape. And Mrs. Earl C. Robertson, the publicity chairman, was in brown organdie, too, made with ruching of the organdie around the decolletage and extending down the back of the skirt and around the hemline in front. Attractive Peggy Mitchell chose peach colored rough crepe with a three-quarter matching jacket. Mrs. William C. White wore white crepe.

Nancy Byers' white organdie frock featured a long scarf of the ruffled organdie forming a cape in front and draped down the back to the hemline. Pink and white flowered satin fashioned Patsy Mellon's gown, and blue crepe with a design of carnations resembling a steel engraving that of Mrs. R. Green Annan.

Analana Beeson, arriving late, was wearing white lace, and at one of the tables I noticed Constance Verner, in flowered white satin, with Pete Ladley. Gretchen Lappe was in black crepe with an emerald green sash. A frilly dress of foam-green organdie with the sleeves and sash of green barred organdie, was worn by Katharine Ward.

Many Other Beautiful Gowns Worn by Fashionables in Audience

Eleanor Smith wore hydrangea blue chiffon; Eleanor Longenecker chose flowered crepe, and Mrs. J. Hanson Rose, in blue-green chiffon. In the snack room I caught a glimpse of Patricia Witherow and Gretchen Rose with Kenneth Rose and John Hay. A summery frock of white satin enhanced by white daisies forming straps over the shoulders and a yellow sash matching the hearts of the daisies was worn by Harriet Fickes.

Flowered crepe formed the gown of Mrs. Alan S. Humphreys, and flowered crepe was also the choice Betty Harris, who was with Walter Lacy, of Texas.

A bouffant frock of yellow organdie with the full skirt featuring innumerable fine tucks was chosen by Eleanor McKennan and green chiffon by Betty McCance. Mrs. William H. Normecutt wore gray satin. Green chiffon was favored by Mrs. D. D. Moses, and white crepe with a short, fitted jacket of blue and red and white plaid organdie was Rita Borntraeger's costume.

In the afternoon the committee gave as part of the benefit a children's party, featuring a dog show, a movie, a magician, a fish pond game and ice cream and cake for refreshments for little boys and girls.

Elizabeth Lawther Odell to Be Honored With Many Parties Before Her Marriage

Honoring Elizabeth Lawther Odell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Owen Davies Odell, who'll become Mrs. Philip Chabot Smith, of London, England, June 30 in vine-clad Sewickley Presbyterian Church—her father's church—will be many parties.

Susan O'Neil will give the rehearsal dinner at the Edgeworth Club for the bridal party the night before the wedding.

And that same night, Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison will be hostess to the guests here from out-of-town for the wedding.

Mrs. Howell C. Cooper whose daughter, Mrs. Roger Robb, will be matron of honor, will give the wedding breakfast on June 30 in the Allegheny Country Club. And Mrs. Wilson A. Campbell will give a luncheon in her home for the out-of-town guests.

Today will be the second and closing day of that important sports and social event which opened yesterday—the woman's invitation golf championship at the Allegheny Country Club, an annual affair.

Still another major event will attract the smart set to Sewickley tomorrow—the annual Sewickley Dog Show in the show ring of the Allegheny Country Club, Sewickley Heights.

And many will dash from the dog show and golf tournament to town for a wedding at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon—that of Polly Schoyer, daughter of the William E. Schoyers, and Ernest Brooks, Jr., son of the Ernest Brookses, of Cedarhurst, L. I., to take place in the First Unitarian Church, Morewood and Ellsworth avenues.

October 13 Institute Date

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

According to Miss Helen St. Peter, the chairman, this year's drama institute of the Drama League of Pittsburgh will be conducted at Carnegie Institute of Technology and the date is Saturday, October 13.

The institute, which is a direct outgrowth of the stimulating national conference on the drama, held in 1925 in Carnegie Institute of Technology, will consist of lectures, demonstrations and round-table conferences on various phases of the drama, and is intended to be an introduction to the amateur players' contest as well as a help to the numerous women's clubs which regularly include the drama in their yearly programs.

In order to avoid conflict of date with any major production at the drama school, the date has been placed two weeks earlier than last year, when the second institute was held at the Pennsylvania College for Women. Since October 13 is also the date for the football game between the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Southern California, it is expected that many students from distant colleges will attend the morning session of the drama institute.

Miss St. Peter is to be assisted by Mrs. W. C. Hawley, and Carl B. Cass.

Valley President To Be Honored In September

With Mrs. James H. Hudepohl in the president's chair, the Allegheny Valley Woman's Club will begin another season on September 8, when the president will be honored and the Wachter String Quartet will give the program. Attorney Mary Thompson Denman, the Rev. E. V. Condron, J. Frank Lanning, Miss Elsie Metz, the Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, C. J. Latta and Charles L. Reizenstein are listed among the speakers for next year and in addition to the programs which they will give there will be the annual card party in October, a recital by the Melody Trio, a mother and daughter banquet, and an evening meeting at which the juniors will be entertained.

The closing session on June 4 is designated as recreation day. Besides Mrs. Hudepohl officers for next year will be Mrs. Norman G. Jacobs and Mrs. George E. Parfitt, vice presidents; Mrs. Walter F. Heid, recording secretary; Mrs. Louis Lippert, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. W. J. Rolston, treasurer.

Miss Reinstein Weds Joseph Cohn

Mrs. Pearl Reinstein, of Murray avenue, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Yetta Reinstein, to Joseph Cohn, of Huntingdon, Pa., son of Reuben Cohn, of Altoona.

Rabbi Goodman Rose officiated in the Beth Shalom Synagogue, on Tuesday. After a honeymoon in Bermuda Mr. and Mrs. Cohn will be at home in Huntingdon.

Forest Hills Season Is Ended

The Forest Hills Woman's Club, which is probably the only woman's club (in this district at least) which has boasted a vigilante and home defense committee, has closed another season. Very early in the club's history (it is now 14 years old) this committee was formed with Mrs. A. C. Streamer as chairman and the women became proficient marksmen. Reports of their organized efforts to protect their homes became widespread and prowlers and burglars became less frequent visitors to the community.

Next year the women will have among their speakers Charles L. Reizenstein, who will give the president's day talk; Florence Fisher Parry and Cy Hungerford, Juliet Bartlett, Helen Machette, Ralph Lewando and the Forest Hills Choral Society will provide some of the music and two of the programs, "Vacation Experiences" and "Historical Landmarks in Our Own Vicinity," will be given by the members themselves.

The president's day reception, which is dated for November 15, will take place at the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. The December program will be on "Christmas in Other Lands" and will be the offering of three club members in the costumes of their native lands.

Women Will Take Active Part in Festival

Women from civic, social, educational and religious fields of the Pittsburgh district are identified in one way or another with the third annual Independence Day festival at Schenley Park.

Among those on the festival's advisory committee are Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., Miss Isabella C. Chalfant, Mrs. Oliver J. Haller, Mrs. J. L. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, Miss M. Helen Marks, Mrs. C. L. Pierce, Jr., Mrs. T. M. Stahlman and Miss Frances Weller.

Others engaged in the activities of this civil enterprise include Mrs. Will Earhart, who is chairman of the festival's program committee, Mrs. C. A. Rehtmeyer, and Miss Katherine Lawless.

More than 3,500 men, women and children from the various organizations participating in the festival are expected to take part again this year, before three audiences. The programs will be carried out simultaneously at Flagstaff Hill and at the bandstand in the afternoon and in the evening a colorful pageant will be presented.

Cary Zollinger To Marry on June 30

Miss Cary Zollinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Cleveland Zollinger, of Ridge avenue, Ben Avon, has chosen June 30 as the date for her marriage to George Wesley Bubb, son of Mrs. Clara Bubb, of Coraopolis.

The ceremony is to take place in the Ben Avon Presbyterian Church at 5:30 o'clock with the Rev. William T. Lytle, pastor, officiating.

Mrs. Fred L. Stout, Jr., is to be matron of honor, and Miss Carolyn Erb will be bridesmaid. Little Mary Frances Troxell will be the flower girl. Kenneth Bubb is to be his cousin's best man, and another cousin, John Coffin, Franklin Neely, Raymond Tucker, and from Glassport, Willis Reed, will be ushers.

The dinner and reception will be held in Glen Lee. After a motor trip Mr. Bubb and his bride will be at home in Church avenue, Ben Avon.

Miss Zollinger attended Bethany College and her fiance attended State College and Massanutton Military Academy.

Anna Glick Weds Samuel Goldblatt

Announcement is made of the marriage Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock of Miss Anna Glick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Glick, of McKees Rocks, to Samuel Goldblatt, son of Mrs. R. Goldblatt, of McKees Rocks.

The ceremony took place in the study of Rabbi B. A. Lichter. Mr. and Mrs. Goldblatt are on a motor trip to Chicago and the Middle West and when they return after July 4, will live in Broadway, West Park.

Playhouse Will Aid In Welfare Work

The Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse announces that it will co-operate with any local group attempting to raise funds for welfare work or for any other worthwhile activity and that any such organization, no matter how large or small its membership, may arrange benefit performances with the Playhouse.

Mrs. Evan Jones, at the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse office in the William Penn Hotel, will furnish information.

Mrs. John L. Perry, again program chairman for the Southern Club, entertained the members of her committee at luncheon yesterday in her home, Broadway, Dormont. Her guests included Mrs. D. B. Frampton, president of the Club, and Mrs. Walter Close, Mrs. J. W. Rese, Mrs. E. Jerry Uhl, Mrs. Byron Wade, Mrs. Merle W. Forney, Miss Janet Spaugh, Mrs. M. S. Kimmel and Mrs. Beulah Taylor Marston.

'Kingfish' Collared At Last

By AIRCASTER

Amos 'n' Andy may be relieved to know that I ate de "Kingfish." And Lowell Thomas may put me down as a member of his Tall Stories Club—only this story is quite true.

It's customary on the oil tankers steaming southward to Venezuela to trail a heavy line and hook astern to catch dolphins, barracuda and other finny fellows.

No sooner had we crossed the Gulf Stream, some three or four hundred miles southeast of Sandy Hook a few weeks ago, than one of the ship's engineers off watch appeared on deck with a great coil of line and a barb the size of a meat hook. He bound a piece of white rag just above the hook, then tossed it overboard.

Chew the Rag

"Why don't you use a piece of beef for bait?" I asked the seagoing Isaac Walton.

"Cloth's better," he explained. "The belly of a flying fish is white, you know, and the big fellows down under see the white rag skimming along the surface behind the ship and think it's a flier. So it has to be white."

"Do you have much luck?" I asked the engineer.

"Some runs, we do. We catch two, three a day sometimes—big ones, too—fifty, a hundred pounds. But we haven't had much luck lately. The cloth frays and disappears too quickly at the speed we're dragging it through the sea."

But he paid out the coil of rope in hope that some big denizen of the deep might snap at the fake flying fish before it frayed away.

Not a Nibble

For ten, fifteen days the engineer-angler went through the same painstaking performance, and used up about a bale of waste rags, without avail.

It looked as though I weren't going to have any fish story to tell when I came home from the sea, until a few days south of Cape Hatteras on the homeward voyage, I "collared" the Kingfish.

I watched the preparations for trailing out the line that morning, and had a sudden inspiration.

"Hold everything!" I said to the engineer, and ran up forward to my cabin.

I came back a moment later, with a starched white collar in my hand.

"Here's your bait! If we can't catch one, we'll collar one! It's a half-a-dollar collar, and it shouldn't fray."

And the collar was made fast to the hook and thrown over the stern.

That evening, after supper, most of the crew were loafing about the broad stern deck of the Gulfwing when someone shouted "FISH!" and pointed excitedly astern.

COLLARED HIM

A half-dozen seamen ran to the line leading over the ship's side and hove in with all their strength.

A great, bluish-green kingfish, leaping out of the sea, splashing and fighting for his life, soon was hoisted up on deck and lay there, slapping the steel plates with resounding smacks of his powerful tail until the steward and I did the necessary thing with a knife.

One hundred and sixty-five pounds, the kingfish weighed, tricked up on a seven-foot high awning stanchion, and even then his tail still trailed on deck.

And don't tell me that it doesn't take a white-collar sailor to catch a fish.

MUSIC

'Pop' Concert

Hotel Schenley

Summer Night Pop Concerts by the Little Symphony Orchestra under Victor Saudek's direction had their first hearing at Hotel Schenley last night. Owing to the storm it was impossible to use the lovely lawn and the new shell and the concert played in the dining room of the hotel.

Mr. Lissfelt

The concert was sponsored by the Association of American University Women and there was a large audience, which seemed to enjoy the music, demanding many encores. How the orchestra will sound out-of-doors with the new acoustic arrangements still remains to be tried.

The program was the usual light concert music, ranging from the "Mignon Overture," the Strauss "Emperor Waltz" to Irving Berlin.

The Chamber of Commerce Male Chorus, directed by Harvey Gaul, sang a "Serenade" from the "Student Prince," Stewart's "Song of the Camp" and Gaul's popular "Aint It a Shame."

GIRL IN THE FAMILY

Torn Between Loyalty and Love, Which Does Susan Choose?

By Beatrice Burton

No Woman of Broderick Family Ever Worked, Aunt Tells Susan

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I think it's very foolish for you to get yourself excited about this, Susan." Lutie sat down beside her and put one arm around her shoulders. "You'll be married to Wallace in such a short time that it's silly for you to worry about things in this house. And there isn't so much to worry about, anyhow. Your father will soon be home, and in the meantime it isn't going to ruin John's career to pay us a little money every week. The Broderick Arms won't stand half empty forever, either, and pretty soon everything will be fine and dandy for us again.

"And until then the Broderick men will look after the women of the family as they always have," Lutie said, lifting her chin that was beginning to look like crepe where it curved down into her neck. "No woman in the Broderick family has ever had to work, Susan."

"Not for a salary, you mean, Lutie! But they've worked in their houses, just as I have, for no wages at all," Susan declared bluntly, beginning to say all the things she had just made up her mind not to say. "I don't see why it isn't all right for a girl to do office work, or something like that, that requires much more brain than household drudgery. I wish you could see Connie Sayre and the Cullen girls, Lutie. They work—at clean, interesting work—and they're paid for it, but they're cultured and just as refined as you or me or Jessie Bunts!—You ought to see the books that they bring into the house, and the magazines!—And they buy season tickets for the symphony concerts, and Aunt Nell never misses the weekly lecture at the Women's City Club. They're what I call cultured people—and they all work. Every single one of them."

"I'm sure they must be cultured, giving parties where the guests soak their cake in their coffee before they eat it!" remarked Aunt Edna acidly. Susan always lived to regret telling her own family anything about the Cullens for they always brought it up to use against her sooner or later.

Useless to Explain

"Why, that was just fun, Aunt Edna!" Susan spoke with indignation in every syllable. "Nobody really dipped their doughnuts in their coffee and then ate it at that party of theirs. They just called it a 'dunking' party because they thought it was funny. Their manners are just as good as anyone's manners—and they're kind besides. Just think how nice they've been to Mr. Sholes because he's lonely and—" She broke off abruptly, realizing how useless it would be to try to explain the Cullens to Aunt Edna and Lutie.

She carried the breakfast coat upstairs and laid it out on the bed in her cold room, thinking over what Lutie had said about it—that it would be just the thing to slip into when she and Wallace ate breakfast in their hotel sitting room.

Until now she had never thought very much about the intimate side of her marriage and her life afterward with Wallace. She had thought of her wedding and pictured herself coming down the stairs of the old house in a white satin dress and the rose-point lace veil that had belonged to her Grandmother Broderick. She had thought of getting into Wallace's automobile and starting off on her honeymoon, and she had looked forward with a sense of adventure to the new places and people they would see.

But her mind, like the virginal minds of most "nice" girls, had never gone beyond that point. It closed itself now, like a door slamming, upon the thought of actually becoming Wallace's mate, of his love-making as a husband.

She put the breakfast coat back into its glazed cardboard box and shut it away in the bottom drawer of her chiffonier.

Argues With Self

Perhaps everything would be all right again when she saw Wallace in two or three weeks, she thought, staring at the reflection of her troubled face in the looking glass above the chiffonier. . . . It was only since he had gone away that this change in her feeling toward him had occurred. There had been no doubts in her mind the night he had given her the wrist watch and gone down the snowy steps to his waiting taxicab. And, after all, she had known him for eighteen months, and she hadn't known Allen Sholes for that many days. How could she be sure that she was in love with him? Wasn't her constant longing to see him, her excitement when she heard his key in the side door, simply part of her infatuation for a good looking face and big straight body?

Thursday was Anna Oberg's afternoon off duty each week, but she had asked Aunt Edna for the Friday following New Year's day because the Scandinavian Social Center was holding its New Year's ball on Friday night.

The ball was the high point of Anna's entire year. For weeks she had been getting ready for it. She had made a dress for it, a satin dress of great gloss and pinkness. She had dyed a pair of stockings to match it, and she had bought lace mitts and a pair of gray satin slippers.

Dressed in these things she tapped on the panels of Susan's bedroom door on Friday afternoon and asked her if she would let her have just a drop or two of wood-violet toilet water for the center of her lace-edged handkerchief.

Anna Magnificent

"How you think I look?" she asked Susan, but her whole face showed that she knew, without asking, that she was magnificent. The dress was a little too tight but her figure—the ample deep-bosomed figure of a blonde Norse goddess—was so good that no one would notice that, Susan decided.

Susan told her that she was beautiful. "Herbst will never bring you back here tonight after he sees you, Anna," she assured her solemnly. "He'll take you straight to Mr. Bjorne's house to be married." Mr. Bjorne was the pastor of Anna's church, and for years Anna had been planning to have her wedding at his house.

"Never would I get married by the justice of the peace," she had often said to Susan. "Christine Altringer, mine friend, and her man got married in the justice office, and before they are one year married they are in the divorce court downtown. There is no luck when you do not get married by the pastor, I think."

She shook her smooth blond head now. "No, I be not marry Herbst for a long time. I stay here until you get married and John get married. It will not be very long, I think, and I save up a little more money for my wedding. Herbst is poor and he has his old mother to take care of."

She smoothed down the front of her dress placidly while Susan looked at her and wondered how she would take the dismissal from the house when Aunt Edna paid her off on Saturday. She would understand, of course, that they could no longer afford to keep her on, and she would even resent their failure to give her two weeks' notice after her long years of service. She was like that. But she would be heart-broken about going: Susan knew that there was no pretense about her affection for herself and John. Only love, the genuine article, could have made her work for the two of them as she always had.

At 6 o'clock that night the telephone rang, and Susan, who was setting the table with the old Haviland china, hurried to answer it.

Anna Loses Key

"Susan? — Miss Susan?" It was Anna's voice, full of distress. "What you think I do? I leave my pocketbook on the Pearl street car when I come by Scandinavian Hall! My key was in it. How am I going to get in when I come home tonight?"

There was only one key to the back door of the house and Anna had locked the door that afternoon when she went out. Susan had tried to open it a few moments before to set the milk bottles out upon the back porch for Herbst to collect when he came in the morning.

"Well, let's see, Anna. The back door is locked," she said. 'But I'll tell you what I can do—I can see that the side door is left unlocked for you. I'll ask Mr. Sholes not to lock it when he comes in tonight."

Anna thanked her profusely, and Susan went back to the kitchen, leaving the door of it open so that she could hear Allen if he came in, and speak to him about the door.

Through the opening she could see the side door with its uncurtained pane of glass, and she kept glancing at it as she moved around the kitchen, slicing the cold goose that was left from New Year's dinner, opening a jar of spiced current jelly (without which nobody ever ate roast goose according to Aunt Edna), cutting the bread, getting the butter from the ice box and making it into little balls.

"The Brodericks' table hasn't shown any signs of the family poverty yet," Susan observed dryly to herself, filling the battered silver wash pitcher at the sink. She wished that Aunt Edna would let her do the ordering of meals for a while. It wasn't necessary for people to have these heavy meals three times a day, with jams and jellies and conserves on the side.

She went into the dining room and filled the heavy cut glass water goblets on the long table. As she opened the swinging door to the kitchen she heard a light tapping on the side door and, looking down through the rear hall, she could see that someone was standing just outside.

Thinking it was Allen Sholes, she ran down the stairs at the end of the hall and threw open the door. Against the darkness stood Mr. Melton, who came to the house every month or six weeks to sell Uncle Worthy the beverage that he called his "bitters" when he took it after meals, and "Christmas cheer" when he poured it into the egg nog for the Christmas day reception.

"Boss home?" asked Mr. Melton of Susan, his voice a hoarse whisper in the wind that came tearing around the corner of the house. His lips barely moved when he spoke, his soft gray hat was pulled down over his eyes and in his arms he held a small square burlap bag that smelled moldy when Uncle Worthy opened them in his office and took out the bottles.

"Yes, he's at home. I'll get him," said Susan, and with a glance over his shoulder at his dark automobile standing in the driveway behind him, Mr. Melton stepped into the house.

COTTONS FOR THE BLAZING ASPHALT

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Left, cool white voile embroidered with black. Note the double voile cuffs and collar revers. Center, string linen lace in beige, brown and navy, with cool slit sleeves.

Right, black voile stitched with white, and inserted over the shoulders and neckline with fine white net.

IT IS NO NEWS that cottons have come out of the kitchen and taken to night club life, but it is always nice to hear that designers are up to fresh tricks with this American fabric, especially in frocks to wear on city streets during the panting days.

For women who dread around a bit of plumpness, cotton is the gift of the angel, for as a class your well upholstered lady is just about the best-groomed one that we have. She has a problem which she makes all her own, and there is many a slimlike sister who could and should take a tip from her.

Freshness, revel and wrinkled, is her ideal, and cotton helps her to achieve it. One wear, and into the tub any well made, color fast, preshrunk cotton frock can go, and ten minutes with a hot iron operated near a cool window will have the model all ready to step out as from a band-box once again.

* * *

VOILE IS A honey in hot weather materials; handkerchief linen, Swiss muslin, dimity and batiste embroidery just a few others that are found in readymades everywhere. One can buy them in qualities that sell for much less than five dollars, or sleuth out special numbers that are made of the finest varieties loomed.

The specialty shops offer many a lingerie frock handsome enough to put a terrible dent in a budget and to show off the most extravagant hat and slippers. Even the family pearls will be glad to see them.

* * *

THOSE STRING LACES woven on a net background are awfully cool and pretty for incidental wear, and seersucker with the help of fine colors and contrasting materials used for trimming is a town-minded commodity these days. Lot of the Russian shops have models made of a crinkly voile, a porous crepe, which requires the merest pressing and no starch to make it able after a tubbing.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We're looking ahead now to the Fourth of July, fellows!

Course, it's a little early yet, but July 4 is such a great day that we can't help thinking about it.

That's Independence Day—which is the day we celebrate the proclamation of our independence from Great Britain. Now both nations are great and strong. Friends again, although then Great Britain fought a war trying to keep the colonies in the British Empire.

Now here's a letter from Edwin Leek, of 66, Rochester, Pa. He writes:

"I am sending in 10 members who want to join the Junior Patrol Club. We have a clubhouse and I have been elected captain. The members are all anxious to get their pins and cards and so I wish you would send them as quickly as possible. I am anxious to get my armband too. Would you please send me another button because I lost mine.

"Some of the members live in other places, so please send all the pins and cards to my house.

"Would you please tell me what other officers we should elect."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Silver Policy Just Keeps Inflation Group Cool

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The silver policy is like an electric fan. It goes through a lot of motions, but it never gets anywhere and is not supposed to.

The only thing it accomplishes is to keep the silverites and inflationists cool for the time being. They (Senator Elmer Thomas, et al) usually get heated up about greenbacks at this time of the year.

That is the story, the whole story, and nothing but the story behind the announcement of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau that he is buying silver "enthusiastically," that he is going to bid up silver prices gradually by purchases until he has a 25 per cent silver backing for the currency.

No one can dispute any part of Mr. Morgenthau's announcement, except possibly his use of the word "enthusiastically." He may have a different conception of his own energy than other people would have.

But no one can ever find out about that now because no one can find out how much silver Mr. Morgenthau is really buying. The operations of his stabilization fund are secret.

INFLATION?

The marketwise experts in silver say that, whatever the amount is, it cannot be very much. They think the Treasury bought one fairly large chunk of silver and then made numerous smaller purchases. However, the currency to be issued against it, in any event, is not enough to be small change in comparison with the total amount of money in circulation.

In other words, it does not mean inflation.

There has been a story going around on the inside that the President, having dropped the fruitless effort to increase commodity prices by buying gold, will now try to accomplish the same purpose by buying silver.

President Roosevelt is quoted in Senatorial circles as having said to a certain Senator:

"Well, now that the gold policy failed, we might as well see if silver will fail."

The President may have been quoted accurately, but still that does not make Mr. Morgenthau's energy any more significant. The Treasury did not buy enough gold to fill an elephant's molars. There is not enough purchasable silver available to permit a forceful effort to influence general commodity price or to establish a 25-75 silver gold ratio during this generation.

INFLATION

There was some real inflation from the Treasury announcement, but it lasted only about 15 minutes.

In commenting on the announcement verbally, one Treasury official said that the silver had been bought at 50 cents an ounce, but the money to be issued against it would be based on the old silver value of $1.29 an ounce. The inflationary prospects of a policy like that are enormous.

After 15 minutes of fluttering among Treasury experts, it finally developed that the announcement was erroneous. The policy in that respect had not actually been determined.

When it is determined, it will provide for issuance of the currency on the value of the purchase price. The difference between that price and $1.29 will be carried on the Treasury books as an unvalued commodity, like office furniture.

You have to be a magician to keep Treasury books these days.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Talkative Girl Wonders Why Boys Stay Away

The news of the world centers about youth—and yet there are those of my young readers who insist nothing exciting ever happens to them.

There are Speak Up, Sisters who tear their hair because they feel the old world is slowing down. They cry out loud to see the wheel speed, and all they draw are the snails crawling by.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am at the very end of endurance . . . I am fed up on this life. I am good looking, and dress ever so well. And I manage to have some right nice dates with my girl friends. But there it ends.

Miss Brunot

I'm a frost where the fellows come in. Once in awhile one of them asks me to go somewhere. But such happenings are as rare as snow in June. It isn't, Miss Brunot, that I don't try hard to be just as charming as I know how, and all those things, in order to win them, but lose out nearly every time. I talk a great deal, and have plenty of things to say. In fact, one of my girl friends was mean enough to tell me, one of the boys said I was like Tennyson's Brook.

I have a nice home to entertain in. And a big porch that runs all around the side of our house. And we have a swing and easy chairs on it. Yet no fellows ask me for a home date. I am 17 years old.

Please help me. ELLEN.

Ellen, if I were you, instead of being angry at the girl who said the boy likened you to Tennyson's Brook, I'd thank her... The good listener always is at PAR with the men . . . . While the girl who never gives anyone the FLOOR arrives quite rapidly at a self-created isolation.

Maybe you also think your clothes and your fine house are too important. It may make you condescending toward others. And the girl who acts patronizingly toward her friends does not keep them very long . . . Real young men never care for a girl because of her material worth . . . That is one of the wonderful qualities of youth . . . we are weighed for our own personal merits.

Be your age, Ellen . . . Also keep close to the girl friends you already have made . . . They should help you win the boys you admire . . . . Watch the methods of the popular girls you know, and emulate them.

Kindness, tolerance, pleasant smiles, a hearty interest in what others are doing and thinking . . . these characteristics will fill your porch with desirable swains before the summer wanes.

Heed Child's Complaints

By LISA GRENELLE

Some years ago I was an "efficiency expert." And do you know what being a successful "efficiency expert," or office manager, is boiled down to? Not having secret systems or being alert and able; not long years of experience, or "knowing it all"—but the ability to learn something every day from everyone, even the telephone operator and the clerk, and being able to get at the bottom of everyone's complaints.

And so it follows that the happiest home atmosphere is created by the woman who has the patience and takes the trouble to get at the bottom of her family's complaints.

Even seemingly silly complaints have significance, especially if continuous. The direct cause is often trivial, but the reason back of it, unless it is an isolated case, is important.

Continuous criticism, whether or not it seems justified on the surface, denotes a maladjusted and discontented element—a condition which, if caused by only one person, is disturbing and distracting to all, if indeed it does not become positively vicious. Under such a handicap a home will not remain happy. The situation must be treated from the source—cured or removed.

Only unhappy, maladjusted, jealous, wronged people complain constantly—either adults or children. There is always some reason for this feeling of jealousy, resentment or discontent. Usually, especially in the case of children, it can be removed. Also, the fundamental cause in a child is more easily discovered.

If a child, especially an adolescent, is continuously criticising her younger sister, say, it doesn't mean, probably, either that the complainant has a mean disposition, or that the younger sister's conduct is particularly open to criticism. It means, rather, that the older sister is jealous of the younger, for some cause which you should be able to discern. Is little sister prettier, or brighter at school? Has she more beaux? Do you or father or any member of the family compare the two, in favor of the younger?

If Jimmie complains constantly of his father, even though all his criticisms are just, they probably have nothing to do with the real trouble. They merely indicate that Jimmie's relationship with his father has gone haywire. His father has hurt him so deeply that he resents it, or possibly has brought upon him some failure or humiliation; perhaps laughed at him, or ridiculed or taken too lightly something highly important in the eyes of the boy.

If a child's complaints are not specifically directed against anyone, the general atmosphere of the home probably is uncomfortable, irritating and unsatisfactory to the child.

Whatever the real reason, you may be sure it is logical and simple, and it should be possible to eradicate it.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Lazy gals who won't count their calories or work their muscles can go to reducing establishments and be disciplined. If they plank down their money, they're likely to obey orders.

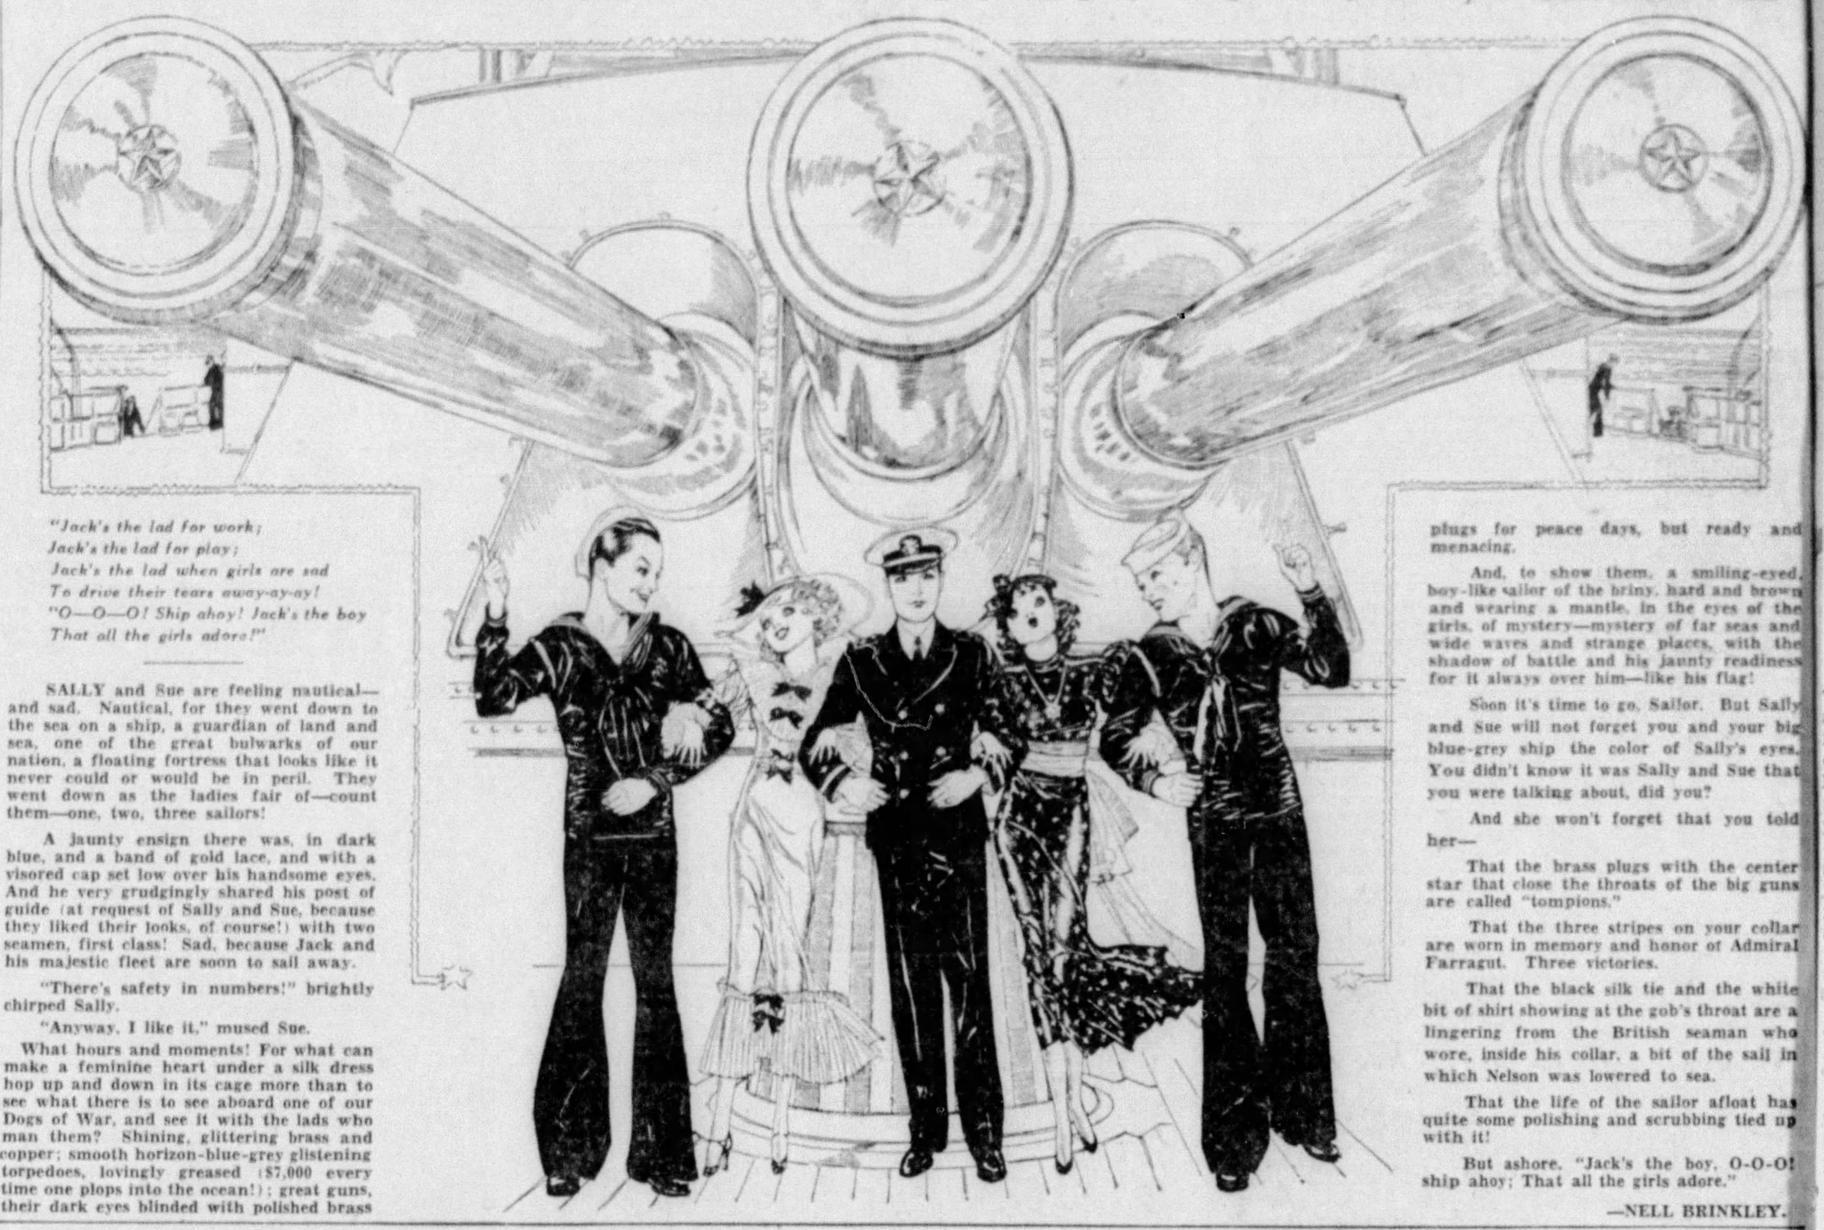
Before getting the summer permanent, decide upon the kind of coiffure you desire and have the hair styled and cut. The properly achieved wave will create ringleted ends which, of course, aren't quite so nice after they are trimmed.

Give yourself three hot oil treatments before submitting to the ordeal with the little tin tea kettles. The wave will be softer, more fluid.

Elbows and knees! Those human hinges are never anything to shout about with joy. Skin always coarse on 'em and all too often it is gray and dingy looking.

She who lolls on bathing beaches would do well to rub knees and elbows with a cut lemon, performing that rite every night of her life. When the juice has dried on, massage briskly with coconut oil, keeping on with the friction until the oil has disappeared. Slap on talcum powder.

SALLY AND SUE SEE THE SIGHTS WITH THE SAILORS -o- -o- By NELL BRINKLEY



"Jack's the lad for work;
Jack's the lad for play;
Jack's the lad when girls are sad
To drive their tears away-ay-ay!
"O—O—O! Ship ahoy! Jack's the boy
That all the girls adore!"

SALLY and Sue are feeling nautical—and sad. Nautical, for they went down to the sea on a ship, a guardian of land and sea, one of the great bulwarks of our nation, a floating fortress that looks like it never could or would be in peril. They went down as the ladies fair of—count them—one, two, three sailors!

A jaunty ensign there was, in dark blue, and a band of gold lace, and with a visored cap set low over his handsome eyes. And he very grudgingly shared his post of guide (at request of Sally and Sue, because they liked their looks, of course!) with two seamen, first class! Sad, because Jack and his majestic fleet are soon to sail away.

"There's safety in numbers!" brightly chirped Sally.

"Anyway, I like it," mused Sue.

What hours and moments! For what can make a feminine heart under a silk dress hop up and down in its cage more than to see what there is to see aboard one of our Dogs of War, and see it with the lads who man them? Shining, glittering brass and copper; smooth horizon-blue-grey glistening torpedoes, lovingly greased ($7,000 every time one plops into the ocean!); great guns, their dark eyes blinded with polished brass plugs for peace days, but ready and menacing.

And, to show them, a smiling-eyed, boy-like sailor of the briny, hard and brown and wearing a mantle, in the eyes of the girls, of mystery—mystery of far seas and wide waves and strange places, with the shadow of battle and his jaunty readiness for it always over him—like his flag!

Soon it's time to go, Sailor. But Sally and Sue will not forget you and your big blue-grey ship the color of Sally's eyes. You didn't know it was Sally and Sue that you were talking about, did you?

And she won't forget that you told her—

That the brass plugs with the center star that close the throats of the big guns are called "tompions."

That the three stripes on your collar are worn in memory and honor of Admiral Farragut. Three victories.

That the black silk tie and the white bit of shirt showing at the gob's throat are a lingering from the British seaman who wore, inside his collar, a bit of the sail in which Nelson was lowered to sea.

That the life of the sailor afloat has quite some polishing and scrubbing tied up with it!

But ashore, "Jack's the boy, O-O-O! ship ahoy; That all the girls adore."

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Early Care Is Needed in Pyelitis

Recently I received a letter from a physician who specializes in the practice of urology. That specialty is devoted to diseases of the kidney and bladder. The doctor wrote that "pyelitis" a common infection of the kidney, is often the result of negligence and in many instances could be prevented. He asked me to write on this subject and emphasize the importance of early recognition and care of this disease.

Dr. Copeland

Pyelitis, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the pelvis of the kidney. The pelvis is that part of the kidney where the urine collects before it passes into the ureter. The ureter is the tube or passageway that carries the urine to the bladder.

Pyelitis can often be traced to a localized infection of some remote part of the body. Infection in the tonsils, nasal sinuses or teeth, may be the underlying cause. For example, a child suffers from infected tonsils and the poisons are absorbed into the circulation. They may then be carried to the kidney and produce pyelitis.

This disease is a common affliction of young children and infants. Unfortunately, it is often overlooked in these sufferers and because it is not controlled serious damage is done to the kidneys. Of course, pyelitis may also attack adults. In older persons it is sometimes the result of an obstruction somewhere in the kidney, ureter or bladder. In elderly males it is often the result of an enlarged prostate gland.

As a rule, the patient has a constant fever. He complains of slight pain or discomfort in the region of the kidney. But persistent headache, nausea, vomiting, loss of appetite and digestive disturbances, are symptoms that should not be overlooked.

Treatment consists of special diet, urinary antiseptics, particularly getting rid of the underlying point of infection. The diet should be simple, nutritious and bland. Salt, pepper, spices, pickles and other condiments should be avoided. I can think of no better advice than to encourage the drinking of copious amounts of water. In fact, it is recommended that in this ailment at least one glass of water be taken every hour.

The urinary antiseptic will be prescribed by the physician who is familiar with the case. There are a variety of these antiseptics, but they should be taken only on the advice of your doctor.

Periodic examination of the urine is of the utmost importance. In suspected cases of pyelitis, urinalysis will reveal pus cells, blood cells and give other evidence to confirm the diagnosis. In many instances, unsuspected cases of pyelitis are discovered by a careful examination of the urine.

Repeated attacks of pyelitis are a menace to the future health and function of the involved kidney. Every effort should be made to reduce the dangers of infection to the kidney. Unless care is taken of them, serious and permanent damage may occur to these vital organs.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gift for the Graduate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me what is the proper gift for a young girl who has been going with a young man for the past six months, to give him on the occasion of his graduation from professional college?

The only gift so far suggested has been a photograph, as the young man has asked for one several times, but the girl is reluctant to give this, preferring to give something else. D.

This is a wise girl, to consider that there would be other times more appropriate than a graduation to give her photograph to a young man. The perfect gift for this occasion is a book carefully chosen. Since he is graduating from a professional college there will be a wide choice of appropriate books for him, and if she chooses this book with discrimination she will rise high in his estimation.

Junior

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I would like to know if it is correct for a boy, having lost his father, to continue to use the word "junior" when signing his name?

2—Is it proper for a widow to wear her diamond ring on the same finger as before?

A READER.

If the boy's mother is still alive, then the boy continues to use the "junior" after his name. If his mother is alive when he marries, he and his wife will still use the "junior" . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wells Jones, junior . . . for his mother is Mrs. Ralph Wells Jones.

2——Yes.

Turn a Beautiful Back to the World

When you turn your back on the world, be sure it is a beautiful one, advises Ruth Murrin, beauty editor of Good Housekeeping.

Here are some exercises that will not only promote beauty of the back, but give you greater grace and suppleness, and improve you health generally:

1—Sit on the floor with both knees bent and your feet flat. Clasp a hand around each knee with them about one foot apart. Stretch upward and backward, pulling from lower back and abdomen. Keep shoulders flat and chest out, head well up. Return to position. Do this 12 times.

2—Drop on hands and knees, with your back flat, head up, and fingers turned inward toward each other. Bring right knee to chest and head downward. Extend right leg backward, reaching upward. At the same time bend elbows, keeping head up and back flat. Lower the body downward until chest almost touches floor. Return to first position. Alternate legs. Do this eight times.

3—Sit on the floor with right knee to chest and hands clasped around the knee and left leg straight. Roll backward with left foot over head, then come up to sitting position. The chest should be well out and the abdominal muscles pulled in. Do this three times, with alternate legs; repeat altogether 12 times.

4—Sink to the knees. Relax head and spine, letting arms hang loosely until trunk is bent forward as far as possible. Begin to raise upward by using the lower back muscles; then pull the trunk slowly upward. At the same time raise upward from the thighs. The arms should slowly move outward as the body raises upward. Be careful not to tense or hunch the shoulders upward. Return to first position. Do this nine times.

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Avis Sees Hugh's Rescue of Madge

If my terror for the safety of Roderick and Junior had not so obsessed me as to blot out everything else, I should have been chagrined and humiliated beyond measure at the sound of Avis Arlen's voice asking if there were anything she could do.

The sight of her smiling face—I almost wrote smirking, and I am not sure that it is not the better adjective—framed against the half open door of her room diagonally across from the one where Lee Chow was confined, in front of which Hugh and I were standing, would have been equally disconcerting if I had not been insulated by fear from every other emotion.

For I knew only too well the meaning of that enigmatic apparently innocuous, smile upon Avis Arlen's face. She no doubt had witnessed that embracing gesture which Hugh had made, after my father had hurried downstairs with the injunction to us to follow as soon as we had locked the door upon Lee Chow.

MEANS 'AFFAIR' TO AVIS

It had been a necessary gesture to keep me from falling; one that any chivalrous man would have made to any panic-stricken woman of his acquaintance. But to the hectic imagination of Avis Arlen, I knew that the momentary embrace meant but one thing. To her it was the symbol of a more or less serious "affair" between Hugh and me, and she was shyly jubilant that she had acquired what she considered was a potential weapon against me.

I wondered if Hugh would realize this, or if he would be blinded by his chivalrous reluctance to believe anything so evil could come from a girl so young and apparently so naive. But I knew that I could not wait for Hugh's reaction. I must answer the girl's question, and in such a way that she would not guess I was at all disturbed by her unexpected appearance upon the scene.

I was curiously thankful, however, that Hugh seemingly was not at all embarrassed by her sudden advent. He did not take his arms from around me, until utterly ignoring Avis, he said solicitously, "Are you sure you are all right now? I was afraid you were going to fall."

"Perfectly all right," I told him, straightening myself and slipping out of the clasp of his arms. "Thank you so much. I certainly should have fallen if you had not caught me."

I gave him a swift grateful smile, and then turned to the girl in the doorway, who was regarding us with a faintly malicious quirking of her lips.

"Thank you, Avis," I said hastily, "but you know what my father told you. I am sure he would not withdraw his dictum even if I permitted you to come into the hall. The only way you can help me is to stay in your room until the breakfast gong sounds. So please go back now, before my father comes up to see what is causing my delay."

BLAMES HUGH

"Oh! But Mrs. Graham, I don't think he ought to blame me for your delay," she retorted sweetly. "Hugh really is the one your father should censure. Isn't that right, Hugh?"

She smiled at him archly, then closed the door of her room rather precipitately. I knew that she would not risk appearing again, with the possibility of my father's coming back upstairs, and I turned away hastily, with a feeling of impotent fury toward the girl who had tried to make a chivalrous gesture appear cheap and common.

It was but the fraction of a second, however, that anger had any power over me. The next instant I was racing toward Marion's room, intent only upon getting someone to stay with Baby Faith while I joined in the search for Junior and Roderick.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Reading the Distribution

Every card led or played in a game of Bridge has a meaning, and if the Declarer is to attain the best result in any situation he must keep his eyes on the spots on the cards and his mind alert to read the lesson of hand distribution. Many a contract has been lost because the Declarer has failed to stop and study before playing a card from Dummy to the Opening lead, only to regret a few minutes later that he failed to note the size of the card led and thus has no method of judging whether it was probably a fourth-best from a long suit or a top of nothing from a short suit.

I am indebted to Mr. Charles M. May, of Atlanta, Ga., for the interesting hand below, which gives point to this trite statement of a general principle.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ K 10 9 6 3 ♡ A K J 4 ◇ — ♣ K Q 8 3
♠ 8 5 ♡ 6 5 ◇ K J 9 7 2 ♣ J 9 6 5	West North East South	♠ J 7 4 ♡ Q 10 9 8 2 ◇ 10 5 4 ♣ 7 4
	♠ A Q 2 ♡ 7 3 ◇ A Q 8 6 3 ♣ A 10 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Double	4 N T	Pass
5 ♡	Double	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is quite correct. North showing his second biddable suit in response to the Forcing Takeout and signing off after his partner shows three Aces or two Aces and the King of diamonds, by bidding the lowest ranking suit. When South reopens the bidding by bidding five spades, North, as a matter of course, bids six. Actually, against the Opening lead seven could be made.

East's Opening lead was the club 7, which was covered by the Ten, the Jack, and the Queen in the Declarer's hand. This lead could not be a fourth best from the cards in sight in the Declarer's and Dummy's hand, and it was confirmed that it was probably the "top of nothing" by the fact that West played the Jack. This marked he club division as either 4-4-3-2 or 4-4-4-1 and North should have made a mental note of this to aid him in the subsequent development of the hand.

The way he actually played it was to lead a small spade to the Queen, lead the Ace of diamonds and discard a small club. In consequence of this line of play he eventually went down one at his contract of six. The correct line of play is to discard a heart rather than a club, play the Ace of trumps and then, when both follow, lead the Ace and King of hearts and ruff the last heart in Dummy. The closed hand should then be re-entered by ruffing a diamond, and when the remaining trumps are played, West is hopelessly squeezed. He cannot retain his diamond King and at the same time hold on to three clubs, so though the finesse in clubs is clearly marked, with proper play it is not necessary to assure the fulfillment of the contract and an overtrick as well.

Seven should not be bid on the hand because the safe line of play involves the element of risk that the hand that is short of hearts also has length in spades, in which event the third round of hearts would be overruffed, but six is safe in any event.

RETURN OF LINDSTROM BOLSTERS PIRATE ATTACK

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Birkofer Run Producer. Outhits Staff in Pinches. Freakish Fielding Play.

Close Call for Gehrig. Great Horses to Meet Blunders by Referees.

Not only has Ralph Birkofer won more games this season than any other Pittsburgh pitcher, having accounted for even of the local club's 29 victories, or practically one out of every four, but his value to the Pirates when in the game is not confined to his work on the mound. The husky left-hander also has earned already the right to be ranked among the best hitting pitchers in the National League, and every time he is in the lineup his bat gives the Pirates an extra punch. His average of .258 is not a true indication of his worth as a hitter, for his solid swats usually are delivered in the pinches when they do the most good.

Ralph Birkofer

Birkofer was only running true to form yesterday, when, in addition to pitching such excellent relief ball that he yielded only two hits in five and one-third innings, he tied up the score with a game-saving single that drove in two runs and then scored the winning tally himself. There are not many hurlers in whom a pilot can place such a degree of offensive confidence as Manager Traynor showed in his big southpaw when he ordered a sacrifice bunt by Tommy Padden in the sixth inning, with the tying runs on first and second bases and the pitcher coming up next. Birkofer, who socks the ball just about as hard as anybody, has delivered in the same way on several other occasions this season to the advantage of the Pirates. He has knocked in a total of nine runs to date, two more than have been driven in by all of the eight other pitchers on the staff combined.

WHEN PITCHER GETS ASSIST ON STRIKEOUT

From some point of the compass there still comes at times the ancient query as to whether a pitcher is credited with an assist when he strikes out a batter. Of course, the answer always is a flat "No." However, in a season of strange occurrences and peculiar plays, the major leagues have produced a case showing that it really can happen. Tommy Bridges, Detroit pitcher, actually got an assist when he struck out Lyn Lary, of the Red Sox, in a recent game at Boston.

The reason for this was that Bridges was alert enough to dash across the first base line and recover a ball which had broken away from Catcher Mickey Cochrane when Lary swung and missed for his third strike. Bridges grabbed the ball and threw it to Hank Greenberg at first base for a putout before the somewhat befuddled Lary could get to the bag, following a delayed start.

OTHER FOOT WOULD HAVE HALTED GEHRIG

While Lou Gehrig, in spite of a chipped bone in the big toe of his right foot, has remained in the Yankee lineup, even to the extent of playing through two full games in one afternoon, and has continued to pole out game-winning home runs, he admits that if the foul ball from his own bat, which caused the injury, had struck his left foot instead of the right, the mishap would have interrupted his record-playing streak, now extended to 1,408 consecutive games.

Lou Gehrig

Gehrig explains that he gets most of his batting drive off his left leg, and it's the left leg and foot that he uses in touching the bag when fielding at first base, so that if the injury had been suffered to his port pedal the greatest iron-man playing record of all time would have been halted last Sunday. Even the injured right foot causes him to hobble and gives him considerable pain, but he says he is determined to keep going, not for the sake of his record, but because he thinks it best for the interests of the Yankees to stay in the lineup at this time. "If I thought I would hurt the team by remaining in the game," Lou declares, "I wouldn't care about that record. I'd get out."

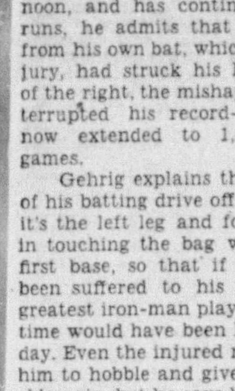
CAVALCADE-PEACE CHANCE DUEL LOOMS

The event eagerly awaited by turf followers as the greatest race of the year, a meeting of Cavalcade and Peace Chance, is promised for July 14, in the $35,000 Arlington Classic at Chicago. That will be Cavalcade's next start, and as the owner of Peace Chance plans to put the Belmont Stakes winner in the same race, the derby king of 1934 will get a chance to fight it out with his only rival for the 3-year-old championship and also to avenge the defeat of his stablemate, High Quest, by Peace Chance in the Belmont. High Quest also is to run in the big Chicago fixture.

Cavalcade's earnings as a 3-year-old to date amount to $80,910. The Sloane colt won $15,730 last season as a juvenile, so that his grand total is $96,640, leaving him only $3,360 shy of attaining a place in the circle of $100,000 winners. Another race being considered for Cavalcade is a match with Equipoise for late August or early September in Detroit.

REFEREES BLUNDER IN BIG TITLE FIGHTS

What causes usually level-headed referees to commit incredible blunders while presiding over heavyweight championship fights? Arthur Donovan was only running true to precedent when, during the Baer-Carnera battle, he was guilty of some errors that might have caused no end of complications had not the bout been so one-sided that his slips failed to affect the result. Wilbur Wood recalls that a number of other heavyweight title affairs were gummed up by foozles on the part of the third man in the ring.



Arthur Donovan

The most violent argument in pugilistic history was precipitated by Dave Barry's famous long count that gave Gene Tunney 14 seconds in which to get up in the seventh round of the second meeting with Jack Dempsey. During the Dempsey-Firpo thriller, the late Johnny Gallagher was guilty of allowing Dempsey to break the rules many times. Unquestionably Dempsey hit Jack Sharkey low several times without drawing any penalty from Referee Jack O'Sullivan, and it was while Sharkey was protesting to the official that Dempsey landed a knockout punch. When Max Schmeling got the verdict over Sharkey on a foul, it took Referee Jim Crowley three minutes to make up his mind, and he acted only when one of the judges, Harold Barnes, insisted that Sharkey be disqualified. Even George Blake came in for some adverse criticism when he stopped the Schmeling-Stribling bout with the Georgian on his feet and only 14 seconds to go in the final frame. And Gunboat Smith was censured for his decision in favor of Sharkey over Schmeling in their second fight, when most of those qualified to judge were of the opinion that Schmeling was entitled to the award.

LOCAL GOLFER TOPS FIELD AT ALLEGHENY

By TOM BIRKS

With a two-stroke lead over one of the most formidable fields that ever competed in the Allegheny Country Club event, Mary Kuhn, captain of the Pittsburgh Field Club women's team, started out this morning in the final round of the annual Allegheny invitation tourney with a fine chance to become the first local girl to win the event.

The completion of the first 18 holes yesterday found Miss Kuhn sitting in a commanding position by virtue of a brilliant 80. She took a 39 on the outward nine, and came home in 41. Two shots behind is Mrs. Marjorie Letts, of Chicago; Mary K. Browne, the former tennis star, of Cleveland, and Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., are bracketed together with 83's; Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, the 1931 winner, has an 84, while Mrs. S. F. Wadsworth, of Oakmont; Nancy Byers, of Allegheny, and Ada MacKenzie, the Canadian star from Toronto, each has 86.

Betty Abernethy, of Oakmont; Fritzie Stifel, of Wheeling, and Mrs. Van Deventer Crisp, of Brookville, Mass., are bunched together with 87's. Mrs. Harley Higbee, of Detroit, the defending titleholder, had an 89, as did Genevieve Bell and Mrs. J. B. Rose, of the home club.

Miss Bell's form, especially on the last nine, where she matched par, was a distinct surprise to the gallery.

Mary K. Browne won the approaching and putting contest, while Mary McCune pulled the outstanding surprise of the after-

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE JAIL BIRD—J. E. J. Hines, familiarly known as "Uncle Johnson" in Carthage, Tenn., has spent 27 of his 65 years of life behind the steel bars of the Smith County Jail—yet he is not and never was a prisoner. In 1907, Hines just wanted a home and a place to sleep and was given a cell and cot by Mack Dean, who was sheriff at the time. Every sheriff of Smith County since Dean has allowed his to stay on, and he earns his keeps by doing odd jobs around the jail. He never leaves unless sent for by the sheriff, and his hobby and chief interest are the Bible and religion. LINCOLN'S WAGON—Nearly 100 years ago Abraham Lincoln built a farm wagon with wheels arranged to be steered like those of the modern automobile, i.e., with stub axles swiveled near the wheels instead of at the middle of the axle. This method of steering is truly called the forerunner of the automobile. The unique wagon is part of the Col. Oldroyd collection of Lincolniana, which was purchased by the United States government in 1926, and it is now in the Lincoln Memorial Museum in Washington. 47 DAYS ANSWERING ONE QUESTION—In 1926, a case was called before Judge Carroll O. Stauffer in Omaha involving a suit for accounting of the Skinner Packing Company against the Dold Packing Company. Solon Burkhardt, president of Dold, was called to the witness stand and the question propounded to him required 47 days to answer. The answer consisted of identifying more than 50,000 exhibits, and the typewritten copy of the court record on this single reply to a court query filled 4,000 sheets of legal-size paper.

The repercussions today following in the wake of the excitement at Forbes Field yesterday could not push into the background the fact that the Bucons are shaping up like a better ball club with Fred Lindstrom back on the job.

His splintered finger almost healed, Lindy, in the third notch of the Buccaneer battlefront, rapped out four hits yesterday, his second double scoring the run that gave the Oaklanders a 7-to-6 victory over the Braves.

TAKES PIE'S NOTCH

Manager Traynor had four safeties while batting in the third position in the opening clash with the New Englanders, but as quickly as the former Giant said he was able to play, Pie immediately took himself out of the third spot and dropped to the sixth position to make room for Lindstrom.

Pie's unselfish move was questioned as to its teamwork merit, but the skipper hastened to assure the doubters that Lindy was more effective in the third spot than himself.

Lindy is one of the greatest hit-and-run boys of baseball, and this clever form of attack pays a better premium when the lively ball is in play, so Traynor has

DETROIT TIGERS REGAIN LEAD IN AMERICAN LEAGUE CHASE

GIANTS FALTER IN NATIONAL FLAG RACE

Associated Press.

For the third time this season the "dark horses" of the American League, Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers, were at the head of the standing today, and to make the race more exciting, three clubs had tangled themselves into a virtual tie for third place.

These developments in the junior circuit overshadowed the exciting affairs in the National League, where the New York Giants' lead was reduced to three games and the Pittsburgh Pirates showed their eagerness to get back into the race by battling the umpires as well as the opposition in a game which brought them a 7 to 6 victory over the Boston Braves.

TIGERS BEAT NATS

The Tigers sank their claws into the Washington Senators for an 11 to 3 victory that carried them back to the lead. Held in check by Bob Burke for seven innings they cut loose with a rally in the eighth in which everybody but the bat boy hit. They scored nine runs before Johnny Milligan, rookie southpaw, got them out.

Meanwhile the Cleveland Indians defied the power of Lefty Gomez and downed the Yankees, 4 to 1. Instead of his thirteenth victory of the season, Gomez got his second defeat when the Tribe touched him for hits when they counted. Monte Pearson limited the Yanks to seven blows.

The victorious Cleveland club went into third place in the standing while Boston's Red Sox trailed along to fourth and Washington dropped to fifth, only four percentage points separating the trio, however. The Red Sox defeated the White Sox, 11 to 1, when they collected 18 blows, at least one for every player, while Fritz Ostermueller gave only nine.

The Browns and Athletics wound up in a 3-3 tie when rain ended their encounter after seven innings of a scrap which brought only three hits for each team. Al Benton worked for the A's and Ivy Andrews and Bill McAfee for St. Louis.

Pittsburgh's argument with Umpires Rigler and Magerkurth started during Boston's five-run rally in the fourth over a drive which Cookie Lavagetto trapped. After 15 minutes' delay Magerkurth decided to allow the double play. He got in hot water later by refusing to count Fred Lindstrom's run when Gus Suhr was thrown out trying to stretch a hit to a double.

GIANTS TROUNCED

The Giants took their worst licking of the season at Chicago, when the Cubs lashed out with an 18-hit attack on Watson Clark and Clyde Castleman, and won, 15 to 2. Chuck Klein socked his eighteenth homer with the bases full as the big blow of the game. Mel Ott also hit homer No. 18 after the damage had been done.

The second place Cardinals disposed of Brooklyn easily enough, 7 to 2, when Paul Dean pitched eight-hit ball for his ninth victory of the season. Manager Frank Frisch hit five for five and Jim Collins bounced his sixteenth homer into the stands.

The Phillies squared their private argument with the Reds by winning, 4 to 2, in 10 innings as young Irvine Jeffries singled home the winning runs.

decided that Fred will be very valuable in smacking the Waner boys around the paths.

The fifth and rubber fight of the exciting series of the Braves and Bucs will be staged today. It will bring a southpaw duel featuring Eddie Brandt and Larry French.

Two separate and distinct detonations enlivened the fourth clash of the Braves and Pirates. The first outbreak occurred in the fourth inning when Cookie Lavagetto intentionally dropped a liner with the idea of making a double play. The smart execution of the heady number of the Italian kid was applauded, but Umpires Magerkuth and Rigler, after reversing each other, finally ruled that only one batter was out. Meantime the players of both clubs were kicking up a big fuss. When play was resumed, the Braves rolled up four runs. Small wonder the Bucs were sore.

The second scene developed in the fifth inning immediately after Makerkurth had ruled that Lindstrom, rushing in from second, had not reached the plate before Gus Suhr slammed a wicked liner to right, but Thompson's fine throw flagged him at the midway station.

Lindstrom and his buddies aver he was over the barrier by yards, and in two or three seconds a dozen Buccos were in the big arbiter's hair. When the Major refused to recant, the Buccos refused to return to the playing field.

It was a strange sight, indeed, Makerkurth finally yanked out his watch. The threat that the game would be forfeited brought the Buccos onto the field.

LINDY'S HIT WINS

Pie's crew were two runs in arrears when they resumed hostilities. The new pilot set the pace to victory with a single. Lavagetto also singled and Birkofer's single in the inning tied up the game. Lindy's double scored L. Waner with the winning run.

Traynor to Speak At Benswanger Fete

With reservation requests coming in fast, the testimoniay banquet to be given Pirate President William E. Benswanger at the William Penn Hotel Saturday night of next week promises to be a highly enjoyable affair. The event will top off the silver jubilee celebration of Forbes Field, which will be observed next Saturday.

John H. Harris and A. K. Rowswell, chairman of the banquet committee, announced yesterday that Harold J. (Pie) Traynor, new manager of the Pirates, would be one of the speakers at the dinner. Members of the Pittsburgh and Chicago clubs will be in attendance at the repast.

YALE OARSMEN VICTORS OVER HARVARD

By BILL CORUM

Universal Service.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 23.—The shouting and the tumult dies, the captains and the kings depart, and Yale, she rules the water.

The triumph of the New Deal is not complete on land and sea. President Franklin D. Roosevelt came here to see his son, Franklin D. Jr., and his alma mater, Harvard, continue a three-year rowing supremacy over Yale. But when the summer sun rose over the Thames this morning, fair Harvard had yet to win a race.

It was three strikes and out for the Crimson oars from Cambridge in the freshman, junior varsity and varsity races.

BOTH CRACK RECORD

It took a record-breaking Yale boat to turn back a record-breaking Harvard boat in the big race rowed through 16 million dollars worth of yachts and the largest and most distinguished regatta crowd in the history of this century old sporting fixture at twilight last evening. But Yale had the record-breaking boat and Yale's sun-browned oarsmen had the race all the way.

The losing Harvard crew broke the four mile down-stream record of 20 minutes and 2 seconds set by Charley Lund's Crimson eight in 1916. But the victorious Eli outfitted the unbelievable, and seemingly impossible, by rowing the distance in 19:51 40-5. This was the first time in all the years that any crew ever had beaten 20 minutes in a race on the Thames. Harvard's time was 20:01 3-5. But in setting down these remarkable times it is only fair to mention that the down-stream course here is not quite a full four miles. It is, to be exact, 150 yards short of that distance.

Except for a meagre and brief advantage gained by a furious racing start in which Stroke Drury drove the beat up to 37, the Harvard shell was behind from start to finish. But there is this to be said for it—never did it stop trying. On four different occasions it challenged the scudding cedar splinter with rhythmic blue oars, only to have the Elis meet and beat back the challenge each time.

At the finish Drury collapsed in his seat from his courageous though futile efforts to make a rough and ready "power house" boat beat an undefeated Yale crew that would have annoyed any eight-oared shell in rowing history.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS

The visit of the President of the United States added an unusual and popular touch that made the crowd by far the largest since the depression.

The fact that he, Mr. Roosevelt, had a son and namesake rowing in the Harvard frosh shell gave it another unique angle, and added to this was the more or less apparent fact that our better known millionaires have about decided that the depression is a thing of the past. They are taking their yachts out of drydock, or wherever it is they have had them the past five years.

Only once before had a President visited the regatta while in office. That was Theodore Roosevelt in 1905, and Teddy proved no better mascot for Harvard than his relative Franklin D. did 29 years later. Yale won that one in 1905, too, and needless to say, Teddy was not "dee-e-lighted."

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Three Pittsburgh stars and a Cleveland ace battle at Stanton Heights this afternoon in semi-final men's singles frays of the forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships. Nary a local, however, graces the penultimate bracket of the women's singles division, two Clevelanders, a Butlerite, and a Morgantown girl being slated to engage in vital contests prior to the masculine melees.

Frank Broida, crack Harvard portsider, and Russ Unger, Stanton giant-killer, who has already downed two seeded entries and carried off decisions in four extra-set jousts, will meet in the first of the feature attractions, with P. A. A.'s Dr. Dave O'Loughlin battling LeRoy Weir, Buckeye hope, in what may prove the tourney's classiest contest immediately thereafter. Both semi-finals are booked for the best-of-five-sets route.

GIRL STARS MEET

In the feminine section, Frances Grimes, stellar West Virginian, meets steady Andree Russell, Forest City public parks premiere, and Mrs. Barbara Duffy, champion of Ohio, will take on Dorothy Anderson, Butler chopster and last surviving possessor of a leg on the Honus Wagner Trophy. Incidentally, not one of today's quartet in the man-to-man scrimmaging has ever captured the David I. McCahill Cup, symbol of West Penn men's singles honors.

Quarter-final and semi-final jousts in men's, women's, and mixed doubles will be reeled off as opportunity presents throughout the afternoon and evening, with final combats scheduled in all branches tomorrow.

Yesterday's skirmishes in the men's bracket of eight brought out three bitter three-set struggles. In the flashiest and most severely played of these, Dave O'Loughlin eliminated Charley Lockhart, brilliant Pittsburgh Golf Club star, who, in losing at 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, ripped off some of the finest tennis ever beheld on the Heights lot. Lockhart reeled off the first four games with the loss of just four points.

BROIDA VICTOR

Meanwhile Broida traveled the limit to take over Bill Haseltine, consistent Philadelphian, and thereby to insure the 1934 safety of the McCahill flagon, on which the Quakerite boasts two legs. The match was conducted cautiously by both parties, with Haseltine's glaring forehand weakness showing badly and Broida none too confident of his own drives from this quarter. He won at 7-5, 3-6, 7-5.

Unger staged a royal brawl with his husky Stanton clubmate, George Henderson. The latter left last night for Montreal, whence he is to sail for England this evening, intended to default at match point—if he got that far. He didn't, though he was near it on several occasions and Unger continued his startling progress toward top laurels.

Mary Madden, clever sister of Joe and Bob of Pitt, suffered a painfully pulled knee muscle in a spill in the third set of her quarter-final seance with Andree Russell and was compelled to default at the 6-2, 3-6, 5-1 stage. In the only other feminine singles fracas of the day, Barbara Duffy out-steadied Dorothy Jarvis, talented Allegheny Country Club driver, 6-4, 7-5.

A sudden violent rain and wind squall abbreviated the Friday doubles hostilities and left this branch of the tournament in a very bad jamup somewhere between quarter-finals and wind-ups. Yesterday's summary:

Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates

To the Sports Editor:

I am glad the newspaper boys adopted the rule in their code of ethics that "sources of confidential information should not be revealed" during their recent convention. Nobody can make me tell now where I get all of these confidential reports like the one I had a few days ago that it was my grandfather who played on the Pirates in 1909. Somebody had the crust to question that. "All right," I said, "have it your way—it was my great-grandfather." "No," he laughed, "I know better. It was you. My grandfather told me he saw you." Now what can you do about that?

STOCKS STAGE MODERATE RALLY

NEW YORK, June 23.—Stocks showed rallying tendencies in the early trading today. Activity was limited.

Santa Fe, American Smelting and Great Western Sugar advanced about a point each. United States Smelting and American Sugar Refining also were firm. United States Steel, National Distillers, Cerro de Pasco, Western Union, United Aircraft and other leaders were fractionally higher. American Tobacco B eased.

Announcement that Germany planned to establish a system of balancing foreign exchange payments by limiting daily foreign disbursements for imports to the amount received for exports helped to stiffen the German mark in early foreign exchange dealings, but did not brighten the outlook for international trade.

While the potential inflationary effects of the silver buying bill were still in controversy, the Treasury continued its purchases of the metal in this market, judging from the substantial decline of holdings in licensed depositories.

In the three days ended Thursday, the decline amounted to 13,904,483 ounces, leaving 88,802,892 still in the licensed vaults here, according to figures of the commodity exchange.

May statistics of the national industrial conference board showed a further increase of 0.2 per cent in payroll disbursements and of 1.1 per cent in the number of people at work compared with April. Manufacturing activity, measured by the total man-hours worked, declined 0.8 per cent. Average hourly earnings were figured at 58.7 per cent, a gain of 1.4 per cent.

As Wall street prepared for federal rule of security exchanges, starting July 1, the head of one of the leading commission houses, with many offices throughout the country, assured its staff and branches in a message that benefits of the measure on the whole likely would be salutary and that the average brokerage house and its customers would not suffer.

Opening ¼ to 1 cent up, wheat afterward rose further. Corn started at ⅛-¾ gain, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

DROP IN STEEL PRODUCTION FORECAST

By B. E. V. LUTY

There is an interesting and somewhat complicated commercial situation in the steel trade, but in the great majority of steel products there is at the moment virtually no market. The condition arises from the fact that with the exception of tin plate, rails and steel for identified construction jobs, higher prices will rule on all shipments made after June 30, while buyers were given contracts at old prices before advances were made last April.

Specifying against these contracts is practically completed while only an insignificant tonnage, in small orders, has been placed at the new prices, for current shipment to buyers without contracts or for shipment after June 30 to any class of buyer.

Shipments have been increasing and will probably be the heaviest next week for any week since June, 1930. Production of finished steel will be less than shipments, as stocks have accumulated at mills, particularly in wire products and tubular goods. Production of ingots has already started to decrease, this week's rate being estimated at 59 per cent of capacity, against 60 per cent last week and the week before. Production will taper off rapidly next week while some mills may be idle the following week on account of a universally observed holiday falling in the middle.

In April, when prices were advanced, it was thought that all buyers who could do so would stock, and as under the code shipments had to be completed by June 30, production would be increasingly heavy until the end of June, with a perpendicular drop thereafter. Stocking on account of the price advances has not been so heavy as was expected, and the automobile industry as a whole has stocked little, but an additional influence developed, fear of labor trouble.

CONSUMPTION ESTIMATE

For about two months past the rate of steel production has not been the close indicator it usually is of the rate of steel consumption, and the same condition, in reverse form, will continue for about two months more. If stocks could only be estimated they could be deducted from production recently, and added to production after this month, to show consumption, but mills cannot distinguish at all closely in the individual orders received between steel for consumption and for stocking, while stocking varies from product to product, from almost nothing in plates and shapes because in general sizes cannot be known in advance, to almost a three months' supply of tubular goods for large oil companies having drilling programs.

A rough estimate of consumption is better than nothing, because with it an idea can be had of the extent of the impending drop in steel production. It is safe to assume that in the week ended April 21 production and consumption were in balance. Production of ingots in that week was at about 53 per cent of capacity. Afterwards consumption rose about two points, thereafter decreasing. Possibly one would not be far wrong in estimating consumption next week at the equivalent of 48 per cent of steel capacity, and the average in July at around 45 per cent.

JULY RATE SEEN 35%

Constructing a series on this basis, and subtracting from production, there is left an amount of steel equal to production in one week at 60 per cent of capacity. Such a result cannot be expected to be at all close but it has some use. A pace of liquidation must also be assumed. Starting with a maximum rate and tapering off to nothing by the end of August, the figures suggest an average rate of steel production in July of around 35 per cent of capacity. It seems unlikely that the official report for July will show this figure to be out as much as five points. The first week or two will presumably be lighter than the month's average.

Mill operations will be supported by business not affected by any price change, including tin plate, rails and steel for identified construction jobs, including freight cars. Mills have been liquidating thoroughly and perhaps they will make some steel for stock.

Heavy melting steel scrap is appraised at $11.50 to $12 a ton delivered Pittsburgh district, the same as for more than three weeks past, and the trade feels that this price stability in face of extreme dullness is a decidedly favorable symptom.

Nation's Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP.)—Bank clearings continue to show some irregularity at a number of points. The total for this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,580,207,000, an increase of 0.5 per cent over the amount reported for the corresponding week of 1933. This contrasted with a gain of 3.5 per cent a week earlier. At New York City clearings were $3,878,489,000, a loss of 4.4 per cent, while the total of $1,701,718,000 for all outside centers was higher by 13.6 per cent than that of a year ago.

Both New York City and Boston again contributed losses this week. Substantially higher clearings are shown at some of the outside centers. The large increase at some of these points, however, reflects the continued restriction in banking operations at these cities a year ago. This week's clearings, as well as those of last year, cover large settlements for corporation tax payments, due at this time.

The gains this week were notably large at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Atlanta, Louisville, New Orleans, Dallas, Portland and Seattle. Total clearings were in excess of the figures for the preceding week this year by $975,502,000; for the same two weeks last year, the gain was $1,103,918,000.

Figures for leading cities showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings for the year to date —totals in thousands:

'BRAIN TRUST,' PRESIDENT TO GET TO WORK

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 23.—Now, that Congress has adjourned, the President and his "brain trusters" will be getting to work. They have the power, and will be appointing commissions, carrying out policies, and spending.

The general slogan adopted by the President is "security," and one of the measures stressed is the housing program. This is supposed to bring government loans for promoting the building industry.

As throwing light upon the chances of success, I think that a letter which I recently received from New Jersey is of interest. It runs as follows:

"I happen to be a small contractor, with from four to five people working for me.

"The codes have practically ruined business in this area for this season, on account of high prices.

"When I stop to realize that lumber has increased in some cases 100 per cent and over since the spring of 1933, I understand why we are doing less business.

"I was going to build a bungalow for myself this year, but, due to costs it is and will be prohibitive for the time being, and I will wait and wait again until prices come back on a fair average to our wages.

"I find that consumer resistance has practically brought our industry to a standstill. You cannot force the public to swallow these prices, as their earning power has not and cannot increase without business recuperating, which it did nicely until last July, when the codes were enforced.

"We are working for the same salaries as we did last year, and cannot pick up much new work, due to costs. In my estimation, people are foolish to build today, according to current prices, as the local lumber yards are operating at from 70 per cent to 200 per cent profit on their stock, and are made to do so by these codes.

"The yards have a little stock on hand yet from which they realize more profit than usual, but wait until they have to operate on their volume of business. Then we will hear them squeal.

"Today in our business we have 1930 prices with the wages of 1914 or 1915. What an opportunity for a man to build a home! The government has set a minimum wage of $15 per week, and it certainly has become the maximum in most cases.

"Our contractors' discount were entirely in our state. I for one can be classified as a violator of the lumber code if necessary, and I don't care who knows it, as I simply buy from another state and cut out all local dealers. The violators in our district are plentiful in every code.

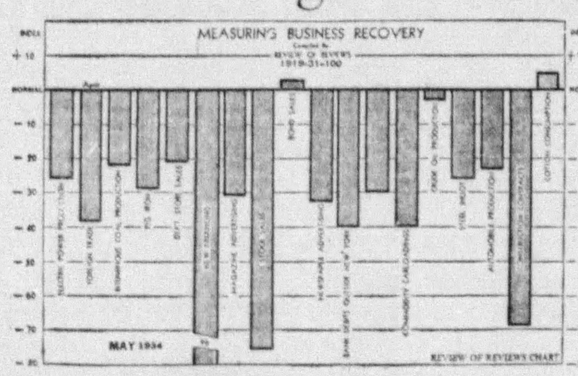
"Our prospects are bewildering; and have reason to be before making such long investments as home building. We must do something, which means readjust prices according to the present trend, which is downward in our line.

"I have learned to adjust myself to the times as they are, and not as they should be."

I have quoted this letter exactly as written, except for a little rearrangement of the paragraphs. Whether you agree with this man's ideas or not, they certainly give us something to think about.

This letter strikes me as being important evidence, first, as to the position of the little business man under the codes; second, as to maladjustments in prices and wages; third, as to the levelling down effect of fixing minimum wages, and fourth, as to prospects of stimulating building by merely offering loans.

Business Recovering On Irregular Front



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

Review of Reviews.

Here is a chart which attempts to measure business recovery, not as a whole, but along particular sections of the front. The course of business may be likened to the progress of an army during war. The line upon which this army advances, being in modern warfare at least, stretched over many miles, is an irregular line and one that does not advance uniformly. In certain parts rapid inroads against the enemy's position will take place, which in others stubborn resistance may hold back the attacking forces.

The analogy applies to business as may be noted from the chart. The line marked "normal" may be considered the objective of the recovery forces. In most cases it represents the average for the 13-year period, 1919-1931. Some of our units in the line of business progress have made notable advances toward their objectives, in two cases at least exceeding their goal—cotton consumption and bond sales. The rest of the units show varying success in their attempts to reach the coveted objective of normalcy.

It is curious in this connection to note that the two fields which have received by all odds the most attention from the government are the ones which have made the least advance, namely, stock sales and construction contracts. The latter has already been the beneficiary of more than two billion dollars of public works. The government in its housing bill is attempting to give this industry additional stimulus through a far-reaching system of guaranteed mortgages and easy credit.

Stock sales, of course, have lagged partly because business and profits have not furnished the basis of speculative activities and partly because of uncertainty regarding the final passage of the government's legislative program.

Taking business as a whole, and making due allowance for the importance of each one of the units, it is still 38.3 per cent below the normal for the month of May.

U. S. Synthetic Rubber 'Ace' Against Combine

LONDON, June 23.—(AP.)—American-made synthetic rubber has been sold for about eight months in Europe and even longer in America, it was revealed by a representative of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., the company which makes it.

He said that European interests long have known the success of the manufacture and understand it can be used to fight the new rubber combine by the governments of Great Britain, India, France, Holland and Siam. He continued:

"We have been selling the synthetic rubber in Europe for the past six or eight months and it has been on the market in the United States even longer."

Experts said it was conceivable that the United States could use the synthetic rubber as a weapon if the governmental combine pushed the price of natural rubber anywhere near the $1.15 a pound price that it reached in 1925.

But even the du Pont representative said, "We don't expect anything like that to happen again in this generation."

Americans in close contact with the rubber market pointed out that the first c

CHAPTER VII

All this time I had been going along with only a right hand—and no defense. My chin was as wide open as the Sahara Desert. But what of it? Nobody was tapping it much—not many were conscious long enough for that—and those who dropped a punch or two on my whiskers might just as well have been dusting me with talcum powder.

I never felt the shots that were exploded.

To please Ham Lorimer I did try for a defense. Looking back at it now, and knowing more about boxing, I'd say it was the goofiest thing that any fighter ever had. It consisted of putting both arms in front of my chest and twirling them swiftly. It left my body wide open—and my chin, too. But Ham had been hounding me so much I had to do something, and that was the easiest thing for me to do.

I had beaten up, by the middle of 1930, practically every heavyweight who was conspicuous on the Pacific Coast—except Frankie Campbell. He was rated as fast, clever and dangerous. He had whipped plenty of good fighters and the championship of the Pacific Coast seemed to lie between us.

Would I fight Frankie Campbell? Yes—when, and where, and let's get going.

Fight That Ended in Tragedy

Ancil Hoffman, who was matchmaking in San Francisco, made us an offer. We accepted, and the fight was staged in the San Francisco ball park on August 25, 1930.

A few hours after it ended, Frankie was dead—and that is a tragedy I will remember so long as I live.

Frankie was a fast, clever fighter and I knew in the first round that I finally was up against somebody who was really going to be a test for me. He kept out of range of my right hand during the first round, and in the second was tying me up pretty well. I took one long swing at him, just as he was letting a punch loose, and I stumbled and fell. He didn't knock me down.

Campbell thought he had, and started toward a corner to wait for the count. But I jumped up and raced after him. He apparently heard me coming and turned partly around. I swung and the right hand punch hit him on the side of his jaw.

Campbell Tangled in the Ropes

He didn't go down and didn't seem to be seriously hurt. We resumed fighting on that spot, and it was a case of give and take for the next two sessions. But as the fourth ended Frankie seemed to be weakening, and I felt sure I would stop him in the next round.

In the fifth I connected with a few solid ones; Frankie staggered, and backed to the ropes. I went after him and started to hit with both hands.

Frankie didn't go down—and I didn't know he was tangled in the ropes. That's something the referee should have seen, and he should have forced me to stop hitting and give Frankie a chance to get clear, or stopped it altogether and given me the fight on a technical knockout.

But he did neither and I continued to punch, as the rules permitted, until Frankie slumped of his own weight—and that ended the fight.

Held Blameless by Campbell's Wife

Frankie was unconscious and never recovered. He was taken to a hospital and died hours later. There was at once a great uproar. I was condemned from one end of California to the other and was called "a butcher." There was demand made on the Boxing Commission that I be barred forever from fighting, "So Baer won't have the opportunity to kill other men."

In the midst of all this Mrs. Campbell said:

"I do not blame you, and hold nothing against you. Both of you went into the ring with the intent to win, and it could just as well have been you as my husband."

I offered to fight Les Kennedy—anybody—and donate my end of it to Mrs. Campbell. But the Commission's answer was to suspend me for a year, with some newspapers condemning it because it didn't make the suspension perpetual.

FIRM BUSINESS TREND SEEN

Predictions that business would fluctuate less during the remaining half of this year than during 1933 were made today as the Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association held its closing session of a three-day convention in the William Penn Hotel.

E. C. Stone, assistant to the president of the Philadelphia Company, told the convention:

"My guess would be that the volume of business, as reflected in the published production and business indexes, will neither go as low as it went in the late fall of 1933 nor as high as it went in the mid-summer last year."

The series of hearings being conducted by the council with public health and civic leaders to determine the extent of social diseases here will be continued. Two hearings have been held.

Memory Test

Answers to yesterday's Sports Memory Test Questions follow:

1—Gene Tunney lost the American light-heavyweight title to Harry Greb in the only defeat of his career, regained it in a return meeting and resigned it in 1925 to enter the heavyweight class.

2—Jim Jeffries' long career included only 21 bouts.

3—The greatest ball-carrying record in collegiate football was made by Red Grange, of Illinois, who, in the game with Michigan, in 1924, handled the ball only five times and scored by touchdowns each time on runs of 96, 67, 56 and 45 yards in the first quarter and 15 yards in the final quarter.

4—A. A. Stagg is the oldest football coach in point of continuous service. He has been coaching 42 years.

COURTESY OF THE ROAD TO YOU

THE Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association sets forth the following as a courtesy guide to the operators of the trucks owned by members of the Association:

The Three "C's" of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association:
COURTESY . . . to other highway users.
CONSIDERATION . . . for his share of the highway.
CO-OPERATION . . . with the people who have helped build our highways.

1. Always keep to the right side of the highway and pull as far to the right side of the road as possible to allow clear passage for passing vehicles. When making deliveries park next to curb, avoid traffic congestion. Park twenty-five feet back of intersection next to curb.

2. Even though you may have legal right of way, let the other driver have it when appearances indicate possibility of an accident.

3. Be especially careful when passing schools or places where children are at play, remembering that the public will condemn you in the event of an accident, no matter how blameless you may be.

4. Stop at STOP signs. Most accidents occur at intersections. Stop signs are effective twenty-four hours a day.

5. Be especially courteous at times when traffic is unusually heavy, giving every benefit of doubt to operators of passenger vehicles.

6. When it becomes necessary to leave your truck unattended, shut off your engine and set your emergency brakes; place in low gear; never stop on curves, at the crest of a hill, or at any point where traffic cannot see your vehicle from all directions; at all times have red lanterns for night and red flags for day in the event of emergency stops, placing them at least 200 feet to the front and rear of your vehicle. When vehicle (two ton or more capacity) is disabled you must burn flares at night.

7. Observe the slogan of the Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety—"Take Time to Be Safe," and keep 500 feet apart.

8. Take long turns at intersections, short turns often result in accidents.

9. Change to low gear from a full stop when about to descend a steep grade; take no chances on your vehicle getting beyond control.

10. Difficult as it may be, try to listen quietly when the impatient owner of a passenger car calls you down for some real or imagined discourtesy or infraction of highway regulations. If you are wrong, apologize; if you are right, apologize just the same.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"It gets worse as it goes along," I assured her. "On his way here for lunch that day he stops and phones his office, pretending he's Wynant, and making that appointment at the Plaza, the idea being to establish Wynant's presence in town.

When he leaves here he goes to the Plaza and asks people if they've seen Wynant, to make that plausible, and for the same reason phones his office to ask if any further word has come in from Wynant, and phones Julia.

"She tells him she's expecting Mimi and she tells him Mimi thought she was lying when she said she didn't know where Wynant was, and Julia probably sounds pretty frightened. So he decides he's got to beat Mimi to the interview and he does. He beats it over there and kills her. He's a terrible shot. I saw him shoot during the war. It's likely he missed her with the first shot, the one that hit the telephone, and didn't succeed in killing her right away with the other four, but he probably thought she was dead, and, anyhow, he had to get out before Mimi arrived, so he dropped the piece of Wynant's chain that he had brought along as a clincher—and his having saved that for three months makes it look as if he'd intended killing her from the beginning—and scoots over to the engineer Hermann's office, where he takes advantage of the breaks and fixes himself up with an alibi.

Worried About Nick

"The two things he doesn't expect—couldn't very well have foreseen—are that Nunheim, hanging around trying to get at the girl, had seen him leave her apartment—may even have heard the shots—and that Mimi, with blackmail in her heart, was going to conceal the chain for use in shaking down her ex-husband. That's why he had to go down to Philadelphia and send me that wire and the letter to himself and one to Aunt Alice later—if Mimi thinks Wynant's throwing suspicion on her she'll get mad enough to give the police the evidence she's got against him. Her desire to hurt Jorgensen nearly gummed that up, though. Macaulay, by the way, knew Jorgensen was Roseben. Right after he killed Wynant he had detectives look Mimi and her family up in Europe—their interest in the estate made them potentially dangerous—and the detectives found out who Jorgensen was. We found the reports in Macaulay's files. He pretended he was getting the information for Wynant, of course. Then he started worrying about me, about my not thinking Wynant guilty and—"

"And why didn't you?"

"Why should he write letters antagonizing Mimi, the one who was helping him by holding back incriminating evidence? That's why I thought the chain had been planted when she did turn it in, only I was a little bit too willing to believe she had done the planting. Morelli worried Macaulay, too, because he didn't want suspicion thrown on anybody who might, in clearing themselves, throw it in the wrong direction. Mimi was all right, because she'd throw it back on Wynant, but everybody else was out. Suspicion thrown on Wynant was the one thing that was guaranteed to keep anybody from suspecting that Wynant was dead, and if Macaulay hadn't killed Wynant, then there was no reason for his having killed either of the others. The most obvious thing in the whole layout and the key to the whole layout was that Wynant had to be dead."

"You mean you thought that from the beginning?" Nora demanded, fixing me with a stern eye.

Had to Be Wynant

"No, darling, though I ought to be ashamed of myself for not seeing it, but once I heard there was a corpse under the floor, I wouldn't have cared if doctors swore it was a woman's, I'd have insisted it was Wynant's. It had to be. It was the one right thing."

"I guess you're awfully tired. That must be what makes you talk like this."

"Then he had Nunheim to worry about, too. After pointing the finger at Morelli, just to show the police he was being useful, he went to see Macaulay. I'm guessing again, sweetheart. I had a phone call from a man who called himself Albert Norman, and the conversation ended with a noise on his end of the wire. My guess is that Nunheim went to see Macaulay and demanded some dough to keep quiet and, when Macaulay tried to bluff him, Nunheim said he'd show him and called me up to make a date with me to see if I'd buy his information—and Macaulay grabbed the phone and gave Nunheim something, if only a promise, but when Guild and I had our little talk with Nunheim, and he ran out on us, then he phoned Macaulay and demanded real action, probably a lump sum, with a promise to beat it out of town, away from us meddling sleuths. We do know he called up that afternoon—Macaulay's telephone operator remembers a Mr. Albert Norman calling up, and she remembers that Macaulay went out right after talking to him, so don't get snooty about this—uh—reconstruction of mine. Macaulay wasn't silly enough to think Nunheim was to be trusted even if he paid him, so he lured him down to this spot he had probably picked out ahead of time and let him have it—and that took care of that."

"Probably," Nora said.

"It's a word you've got to use a lot in this business. The letter to Gilbert was only for the purpose of showing that Wynant had a key to the girl's apartment, and sending Gilbert there was only a way of making sure that he'd fall into the hands of the police, who'd squeeze him and not let him keep the information about the letter and the key to himself. Then Mimi finally comes through with the watch-chain, but meanwhile, another worry comes up. She's persuaded Guild to suspect me a little. I've an idea that when Macaulay came to me this morning with the hooey he intended to get me up to Scarsdale and knock me off, making me No. 3 on the list of Wynant's victims. Maybe he just changed his mind, maybe he thought I was suspicious, too willing to go up there without policemen. Anyhow, Gilbert's lie about having seen Wynant gave him another idea. If he could get somebody to say they had seen Wynant and and stick to it . . . Now this part we know definitely."

"Thank God."

"He went to see Mimi this afternoon—riding up two floors above hers and walking down so the elevator boys wouldn't remember having carried him to her floor—and made her a proposition. He told her there was no question about Wynant's guilt, but that it was doubtful if the police would ever catch him. Meanwhile he, Macaulay, had the whole estate in his hands. He couldn't take a chance on appropriating any of it, but he'd fix it so she could—if she would split with him. He'd give her these bonds he had in his pocket and this check, but she'd have to say that Wynant had given them to her and she'd have to send this note, which he also had, over to Macaulay as if from Wynant. He assured her that Wynant, a fugitive, could not show up to deny his gift, and, except for herself and her children, there was no one else who had any interest in the estate, any reason for questioning the deal. Mimi's not very sensible where she sees a chance to make a profit, so it was all O. K. with her, and he had what he wanted—somebody who'd seen Wynant alive. He warned her that everybody would think Wynant was paying her for some service, but if she simply denied it there would be nothing anybody could prove."

'Not Very Neat'

"Then what he told you this morning about Wynant instructing him to give her any amount she asked for was simply in preparation?"

"Maybe, maybe it was an earlier fumbling towards that idea. Now are you satisfied with what we've got on him?"

"Yes, in a way. There seems to be enough of it, but it's not very neat."

"It's neat enough to send him to the chair," I said, "and that's all that counts. It takes care of all the angles and I can't think of any other theory that would. Naturally it wouldn't hurt to find the pistol, and the typewriter he used for the Wynant letters, and they must be somewhere around where he can get at them when he needs them." (We found them in the Brooklyn apartment he had rented as George Foley.)

"Have it your own way," she said, "but I always thought detectives waited until they had every little detail fixed in—"

"And then wonder why the suspects had time to get to the farthest country that has no extradition treaty."

She laughed. "All right, all right. Still want to leave for San Francisco tomorrow?"

"Not unless you're in a hurry. Let's stick around awhile. This excitement has put us behind in our drinking."

"It's all right by me. What do you think will happen to Mimi and Dorothy and Gilbert now?"

"Nothing new. They'll go on being Mimi and Dorothy and Gilbert just as you and I will go on being us and the Quinns will go on being the Quinns. Murder doesn't round out anybody's life except the murdered's and sometimes the murderer's."

"That may be," Nora said, "but it's all pretty unsatisfactory."

THE END.

Model Builders' Course for Beginners
Lesson No. 12—Making Wire Fittings

By LAWRENCE SHAW, National Director.

The next step in constructing our Low-Wing Flier is to make the wire fittings. In our glider we did not use wire for the simple reason that we had no landing gear, no motor and our wing was permanent instead of adjustable.

First of all, let's make the landing gear.

The .040 gauge wire which we purchased for this member is of such a spring nature that we need no shock absorber incorporated in our landing gear.

Since all bends, in constructing our landing gear, are angular, and not curved, we will use the flat-nose pliers.

The drawing of the finished low wing flier published in this column a few days ago, clearly shows the shape in which to bend your landing gear. Any further description would be unnecessary except that when you have the wire shaped out, slip the wheels onto the tips of the landing gear and then put a drop of cement on each end of the wire.

When this is dried, it will form a "bump" at the end of the wire and prevent the wheels from slipping off. Do not affix your landing gear to your fuselage as yet. We will leave that until we are ready to assemble all parts.

In the diagram published with today's column, we give you the other wire fittings exact size. All you really have to do is lay your .028 wire out on these plans and shape it with your round-nose and flat-nose pliers.

Figure "A" in diagram is the propeller shaft. This shaft is first made in the shape shown by the heavy line. When completed, stick the pointed end through the hub, or center, of your propeller.

After you have inserted your shaft through the hub, then bend the tip as illustrated by dotted line so that the propeller will not be able to come off.

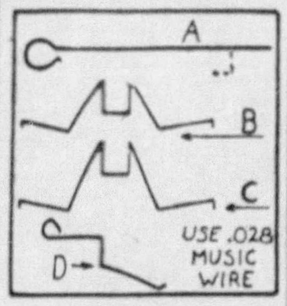
Next place some glue on the end of the shaft, draw the propeller towards the point so that the propeller does not spin on the shaft. It is the shaft, revolving, that turns the propeller. The propeller will not turn free of the shaft.

This latter procedure is illustrated in figure 6 in diagram published the other day, showing the construction steps in carving the propeller.

And now for the wing clips. It is necessary to have the wing of our model adjustable, so that we may move it forward or backward on our fuselage in order to obtain the best position for flying.

Figures "B" and "C" in the diagram published in today's column gives you the front and rear wing clips. "B," the smaller clip, is for the front of the wing; "C," the larger, for the rear.

WIRE FITTINGS



The wire fittings for the low-wing flier. These drawings are exact size—so that you may lay wire over them and bend with pliers.

While there is very little difference in their sizes, be sure that you make them exactly as given in this diagram for this slight variance will give your wing the proper angle of incidence, which is necessary for good performance.

The drawing of the completed model published the other day shows exactly how to fasten the wing clips into position. First place the wing on your work bench in the same position as when you gave it the dihedral angle, with the two wing tips up in the air.

Then take the smaller wing clip and insert it across the center about one-sixteenth inch in back of the front edge, digging the small prongs at each end of the clip into the wing and cementing permanently in place.

Then take the larger wing clip and insert it on the opposite or back edge of the wing, and cement this in place, too. This, too, is shown in the completed drawing of the model published a few days ago.

Figure "D" in today's illustration shows the rear motor hook and the tail skid, a two-in-one fitting. When this is shaped, place it away with you other parts and in our next lesson we will learn how to assemble the complete model.

Daily Short Short-Story

By KATHRINE G. DYAR

"Your bed is number 27, the third from the end," said the matron, and closed the door.

A girl stood before the closed door looking at 15 cents in her hand; a very smart purse hung from her arm gaping emptily, her trim, new, black suit contrasted oddly with the shrunken and faded fumigated blanket that she held in her hand. As she became aware of the faces staring at her she seemed about to turn and run away then came steadily across the room.

The bridge quartet stopped thumbing their limp cards. "A newspaper sister, if you ask me," remarked one of their number. "Run along, little one, there ain't any human interest stuff in this place, we ain't human any more."

The girl reached bed number 27, looked at its frowsy and lumpy surface and began to cry.

* * *

A middle-aged woman from the upper bed leaned over the edge. "It isn't so bad as all that," she offered; "it's a whole lot more private than a doorway and a million times softer than a park bench, crawl in honey, you'll feel better in the morning."

The girl clutched the fumigated blanket and looked up at her. "I've lost my job," she began.

"Imagine that," chorused the others, "do you think you are alone in that?"

"Three weeks without work," she went on, "and the day I was let out, some one picked my pocket, and now my landlady won't let me in my room, and I can't get my clothes or anything, when I've lived there two years, too, you'd think she wouldn't be so mean. Anyway, 15 cents is all I've got in the world."

"Fifteen cents will buy a hot meal, dearie," said the woman in the upper bed, "something I haven't tasted in some days, soup kitchens excepted. Get to bed and try to take it easy."

"I will not," answered the girl. "I can't; it's all too horrible, pretty soon I'll be just like the rest of you. What can I do? I can't beg on the street, my clothes are too good. I can't sell my clothes, for I've nothing else. If I were in rags it would be better. I could beg and people would be sorry for me, but as it is—" She buried her head in the fumigated blankets and cried.

In 10 minutes the room was full of laughter, and when the uproar died down the new girl was arrayed in a collection of the worst things in the crowd. A ragged scarecrow, she stood with a grin on her face, but around her neck was a little string of pearl beads.

"How about the necklace?" cried a girl.

"No," said the scarecrow, stepping away, "these were my mother's. I'll not have any one else wearing them. They aren't worth anything, but they mean a lot to me. I'll just put them on my arm up my sleeve."

"Back in a couple of hours, girls," she cried. Then with her face becoming suddenly grave and miserable again, "and if I don't come back tell them to fish at the end of the pier." The door opened and closed, she was gone.

* * *

Toward dawn there was a sound of voices and a tramping of feet in the office. The lights were snapped on, the doorway was filled with policemen.

"I might have known," said the woman in the upper bed.

"Poor little thing, we shouldn't have let her go; they must be bringing her in now."

"Registered about 10 o'clock," the matron was saying, "her bed is No. 27." She led the way.

The lumpy bed was empty, one could see at a glance that no one had been sleeping there this night.

"Oh dear," wailed the woman in the bed above, "she's gone and jumped in the lake, like she said she would; oh, why didn't some one stop her."

"How long's she been gone?" snapped the officer. "Maybe we can catch her yet."

"She was only here about an hour, it's getting daylight now, she's been gone for hours. Poor little thing." The woman moaned and wrung her hands.

The matron's eyes were sharp. "That looks like the hat she wore; come on you, where's she hiding?"

"She traded all her pretty clothes for the worst in the place. She pretended she wanted to beg in the street. She just did it so we could have her things, the sweet thing, for just as she left, she said to fish for her off the pier if she didn't come back. And we let her go. I'll never forgive myself in this world." The middle-aged woman continued to weep for the stranger.

"Pretty smart," said the policeman. "You got to hand it to her every time. Your girl friend you fixed up with the swell disguise was Lucky Lucy Allen. She was working as a personal maid for a lady on the north side. She left tonight with the lady's pearl necklace."

HOW IT HAPPENED
(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

We got a real nifty interview about the situation in the Greer district, about two weeks ago, and credited it to Ike Dobbs. The sentiments expressed were contrary to those that we would have expected Ike to give out. But we got a notion we were talking to Ike, and we figured may be he had joined the other side. But it wasn't Ike. He didn't go out to the school meeting. We've been figuring around to find out who it was we took for Ike, but we haven't been able to do it. All we can do now is to give the alibi to Mr. Dobbs.

MY ICE MAN

I dearly love our Ice Man!
I wait for him each day
To buy a hundred pounds of ice
And throw it all away.
You see, we have an icebox
Electric, white and trim,
But I have never had the heart
To break the news to him.

I dearly love the Ice Man!
I wait for him to call,
And how my heart goes pit-a-pat
When he steps in the hall!
I know there must be others
As handsome and as nice
But yet, I always shall adore
The love-light in his ice!

Garth Bentley.

Relief Funds

Governor Says Money Transfer Illegal—Special Session Should Be Avoided

Gov. Pinchot effectively and irrevocably has closed the door on the suggestion of State Treasurer Waters that highway department funds be transferred to the general fund for relief purposes. Waters made the suggestion as a means of averting a special legislative session should the federal government refuse further aid without some matching contribution from the state treasury.

The Governor says that legislation of the 1933 session permitting the transfer of motor funds in the event the general fund becomes depleted is not sufficient, but that specific enactments are required for the expenditure of state money. It also is assumed that he takes the position relief expenditures are not a usual general fund charge, but come from special funds ear-marked for the purpose—money raised from liquor profits, for example.

If the Governor adheres to this decision—and of course he will—there is no alternative but a special session should the federal government balk at further assistance. Liquor profits have not been sufficient to carry the relief load, and will not show any spurt during the warm weather, when even the hardiest drinkers taper off in their daily consumption.

Under the circumstances, every effort should be made by public and private agencies to persuade the federal officials not to press the state. A special session this summer would see more of politics than constructive legislation based on sound economics. Perhaps two-thirds of the legislators are candidates for re-election. They would keep at least one eye on the voters, rather than devoting all their energies to impartial accomplishmnt. This is human nature.

They would have to choose between granting re- lief, impossible without new taxes, or turning down relief and declining to disturb the tax structure. From both sides there would be positive pressure. A session would be costly and turbulent.

If the federal government must have a matching contribution, let it continue to advance money now, and serve on the next Legislature an ultimatum that relief funds must be increased. Through greater state effort and smaller allotments from Washington after January first a balance eventually could be attained.

City Controller James P. Kerr is well warranted in investigating why revenue from so-called "fixless tags" has so fallen off in Traffic Court. The present system, declared to be foolproof when adopted, was an answer to the old method whereby only the most law-abiding or the most naive paid any attention to a Traffic Court summons.

It was a lowly citizen who could not find some- where influence to "fix" a tag so it was never heard of again. Some motorists, confident of their immunity, were accustomed to tear tags up even in the presence of the accusing officers—and get away with it.

For a time the new system, with the Controller in charge, worked, and revenue increased. But during the recent months of the McNair administration there has been a reversal. There is not so far any accusation that the "fix" again is being employed. But there has been a practically complete turnover in the personnel of the Traffic Court, and the charge has been made that clerical inefficiency or unfamiliarity with methods is responsible for the fall in revenue.

The investigation to be made by the Controller should develop this, if true, and point the way to remedy. Then it will be up to the Mayor.

Only a few political candidates, most of whom accomplish nothing more than a disturbance of the hearing of their fellow-citizens, should object to the proposed "loud speaker" ordinance. Council should pass it and put an end to the practice of sound wagons dashing about the streets and hooting their messages.

The last session of the Legislature considered a bill to prohibit the use of any form of radio in automobiles while they are in motion, the argument being that radio served to distract the attention of the driver. That was too far-reaching, in the opinion of members, though there was some merit in the argument.

But there is no reasonable objection to be ad- vanced to the Councilmanic ordinance against the sound wagons.

How does the mysterious Mahatma Gandhi con- duct his private life among his many disciples? Nila Cram Cook Hutchins, American girl who spent three years studying the mysticism of India and who was one of the Mahatma's followers, recounts her experiences in the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with tomorrow's Sunday-Sun-Telegraph.

Good American Idea

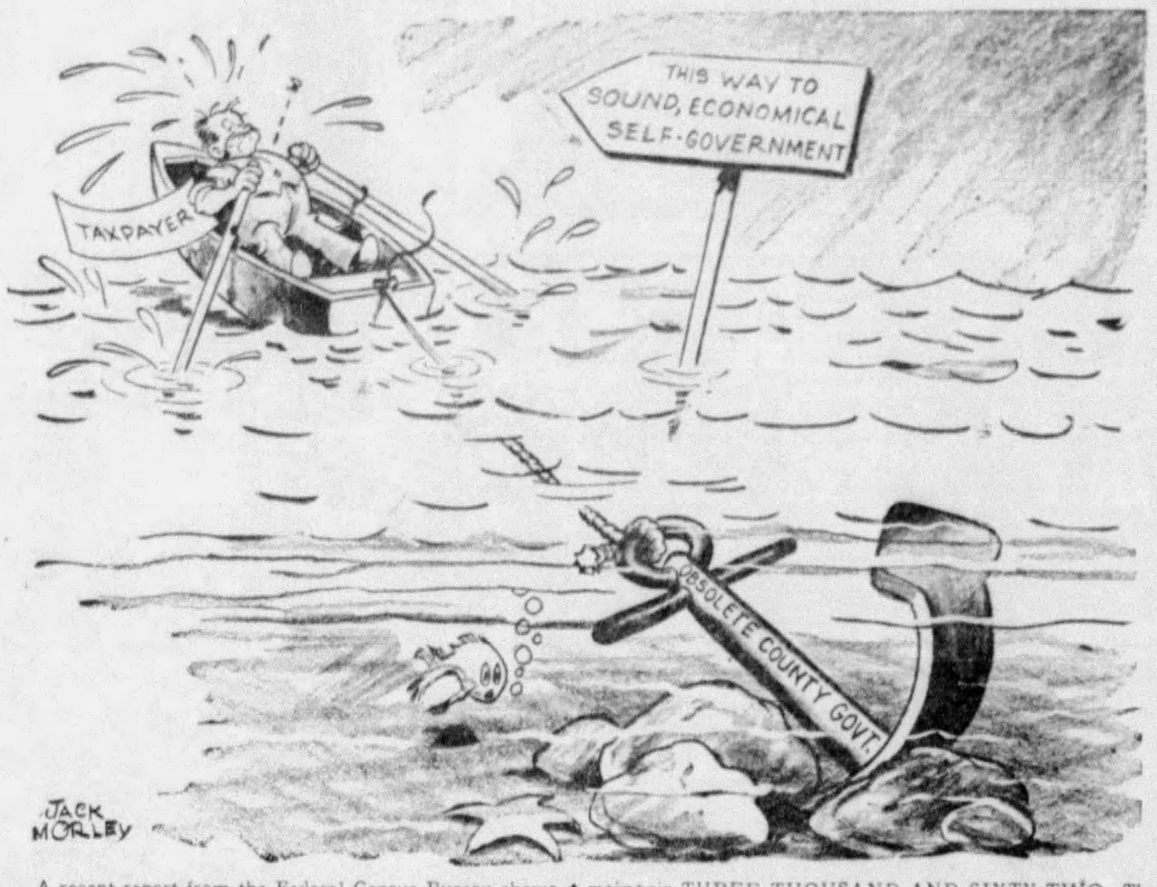
Annual Festival in Observance of Fourth by Foreign Born Inspiring

There will be no celebration of Independence Day in Pittsburgh more inspirational than the third annual festival of our foreign-born neighbors in Schenley Park. This annual demonstration, made possible by the co-operation of various civic groups, as well as Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, has for its purpose the impression of American ideals upon the hearts and within the minds of our friends from across the sea.

It tends to break down racial prejudices through the infiltration of neighborly sentiments as they mingle with one another, and witness the manner in which each group demonstrates the entertaining arts through the medium of song, dance, instrumental music and gymnastics. It is part of their nature to take part in such festal play, personally, and to dedicate it as a mark of emotional approval of something worth celebrating.

Our own people—but, of course, the foreign-born, too, are in that classification now—our own native people will be well repaid for any participation—either active or as spectators—in such a wholesomely profitable way of "spending the Fourth."

Cut Away the Anchor!



A recent report from the Federal Census Bureau shows that it cost the country NINE THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED AND SIXTY MILLION SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS to operate 187,659 governmental units in the several States. This staggering sum does not include the cost of the Federal Government—only State and local governments.

Three hundred counties would suffice in the forty-eight States, but taxpayers are forced, under present conditions, to maintain THREE THOUSAND AND SIXTY-TWO. The taxpayers are forced to support NINE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED AND SIXTY-NINE townships, although that unit is obsolete.

Politicians force the upkeep of these obsolete units to provide sinecures for themselves and their followers. The public pays the bill and will continue to pay the bill until it revolts and elects State legislators who will "cut away the anchor" of obsolete county governments.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 23.—Purely personal piffle: Stuck at the typewriter, I twist one leg around the other until thoughts boop-a-doop. No apartment house asset so valuable as a cheerful doorman. Operetta high-spot: Fritzi Scheff in that drum number. Until yesterday I didn't know "all of us" is wrong.

I'd like to introduce Robert E. Sherwood to a midget. And run like everything. Gloomiest building—Metropolitan Opera. I've never met an oboe player. Claudette Colbert is tops in those kittenish bits. Walt Disney is the most talked about producer in the movies. And the worst paid.

Elissa Landi suggests a creek mud-slide. Bluest book of the decade: "Journey to the End of the Night." Jean Knott and Dr. George Dorsey were the two best poker players I ever faced. Paul Troubetzkoy, the sculptor, the poorest. And Arthur Somerms Roche, the most daring.

Most unappreciated professional career—a country doctor. The American city I want most to see—Charleston, S. C. A nine-year-old cousin, hearing Mary Pickford's name, inquired: "Who's she?" Sic transit gloria mundi! The Joe Penner Era. Or the Age of Consent, where everybody agrees to everything.

* * *

Lanny Ross has the most "It" of the new crooners. Ed Sullivan is best-dressed of the Broadway commentators. I don't believe four out of five have it and can fold a handkerchief rabbit that jumps clear across the room. Henry Sell's life ambition is dandiest—to play piggy back with Charles Evans Hughes at a Town Hall lecture. The only radish I like is one just pulled fresh from the earth. With coarse salt. O, boy! Abe Lyman has made the best of the orchestra movie shorts. John Barrymore is superb playing hammy-actor parts.

* * *

Add nutty requests: The man on a train who asked me to write an original dog story on back of a Pullman menu to take home to the kiddie. The restaurant in the union station at Chicago has the world's loudest singing canary. The Baer-Carnera fight is the only championship brawl that did not interest me the slightest.

* * *

Hoover is now surpassing the applause of his most popular period at the news-reels. Nine American and two English authors have honored me with book dedications. Every girl I've known, save one named Trix has been a redhead. I'm crazy about Doris Kenyon and scrambled eggs with red and green peppers. Anytime there's a drunk at a party look for him hanging around my neck or daring me out into the alley. They never miss.

* * *

Ideal existence: Three months at Barbizon, three in Los Angeles, three in New York and the other three drifting. I only preserve poetry magazines. India inspires the most interesting letters from Americans. When Nat Wills, the tramp comedian, rolled out of a lowered awning for his entrance they had to lead me outside. My Pulitzer prize play choice was Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road." It was authentic and America. I love to bide my time and would rather be shot than answer a phone.

* * *

I'm not superstitious, but any time they give me a $2 bill in change zip goes another customer. The most memorable breakfast was with Ralph Barton and his French bride in the tree tops at the Paris Robison. In police court work I never saw a stoop-shouldered criminal. My grandpa used to say "gin-wine." Winston Guest is the most dashing polo player. I went to tea to E. M. Delafield thinking she was a man. The next clean-up should be among blackmail lawyers. Watch that little gal Jean Muir in the movies. She has what it takes. I've yet to hear anyone speak anything but praise for Paul Whiteman.

* * *

Deac Aylesworth, who once didn't have price of a shave, now has a private barber chair in his office, for goodness sake! As a boy I had the finest baseball outfit in Gallipolis but no team ever wanted me. Rex Cole is the most exquisite of the living poetical cussers. But Mark Twain and Will Hogg topped him. One of the hardest boiled mugs I know is an interior decorator. Clay Morgan has turned out the dandiest travel tome of the day.

I lived on $8 a week for five years blazing a trail for the flood of New York column syndicators that came after. And how lovely they have been! Mrs. Allen Ryan, Jr., now surpasses the highly advertised Mrs. Harrison Williams for chic. All the snobs I knew in my youth have wound up in the ash-can. I like to hear Ben Bernie say "and all the lads." Any time they lift a lognette at me, I'm so down I can't even come up for air!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

We Need to Believe in Something

What this country needs more than anything else is SOMETHING TO BELIEVE IN.

We could use a lot of other things. We could use more jobs, dollars, homes, hospitals, jails, schools, codes, laws. But most of all we need—FAITH.

IT'S LACK OF FAITH, NOT LACK OF FUNDS, THAT'S DRIVING AMERICA ON THE ROCKS.

What starts nations; sweeps them on to success? Faith—and the wild, unreasoning, irresistible fury engendered by faith. A lot of people wanting something . . . believing in the something they want . . . believing they ought to have it . . . then going after it. That's the stuff that makes nations. All big nations have started like that. We started like that.

Nothing could stop the Pilgrims, for they came believing. They believed in God, believed in their right to serve God in their own way, sought a place to do it—didn't care what they had to endure to find it! THEY FOUND WHAT THEY SOUGHT. NOTHING COULD STOP THEM!

Nor could anything stop their children when they revolted against England. They had a new faith, a different crusade than their fathers, but as furious. They believed in Freedom; believed they had a right to be free; fought for that right. AND WON THE THING FOR WHICH THEY FOUGHT!

Belief in God. Belief in Freedom. Faith and fight, backing that belief. Out of that flame came America! Nothing could stop men on fire with such faith. Nothing could stop men fused together by such a common flame. They were the hottest thing on earth!

And for a while the flame went on. A third belief—belief in America itself—in America and Americans. A new frenzy, but equally fierce, and out toward the setting sun swept the long, billowing line of Covered Wagons to conquer the West.

They believed. They had faith in their God, their mission and themselves. They sought. They fought. They won. For one hundred years, that was the history of America.

Then, with safety and growing wealth, the fire cooled. We no longer had one common desire. We were no longer one big flame. We were separate individuals with separate destinies, believing in different things.

Presently most of us stopped believing, or burning, in anything. Spent our energy on wanting, and working, and worrying. Substituted gold for God, finance for faith.

AND THE POWER WENT FROM US, AS THE POWER ALWAYS GOES FROM A PEOPLE WHEN THEY CEASE FLAMING!

Nothing can stop a nation when it's on fire with faith. Nothing can save a nation, except a new faith, when that flame burns down. Last century saw fires burning down all over the world. This century is seeing new fires start.

There's Russia. A little while ago we sneered at Russia, with amused indifference or open contempt. The fire had died out of the old aristocrats. Russia crumbled to ashes. Now Russia is flaming against the sky—on fire with new faith!

There's Germany. A little while ago we were crowing over Germany, saying she was licked. She was. The fire of old Germany had turned to complacent Prussian fat. Germany had gone cold. Today Germany is flaming across the world—on fire with new faith!

You and I may not approve of Russia's or Germany's fire. We may think that Communism, Fascism, Nazism are a menace to civilization. And probably we're right. But faith works, regardless of the motive behind it or the aim before it. Faith works regardless, like that other irresistible power, electricity. Faith works — and nothing can stop its flame except a bigger and better faith!

Russia and Germany are flaming. Whether we like it or not, they're getting somewhere.

In America we're rich, powerful and smart, but we've lost something that was more valuable than all our riches and power, something that made us irresistible when we were poor and weak. WE'VE LOST OUR FAITH.

We don't, as a people, believe in much of anything any more. We want a lot of things, but we aren't on fire about anything any more. Unless we can get on fire again, unless we can burn in one great flaming fury of faith in something—we're going, going, GONE!

THE GUEST CODE

By Winifred Black

I do wish Helena had gone to the school where I went, when I was 14 years old and thought that everybody was either a saint or a sinner and I was trying to make up my mind which one I'd rather be.

If Helena had gone to that school she would have had some excellent letters in deportment. Especially just before the vacations.

We had three vacations in that school—Easter, Christmas and the long vacation.

We had special exercises, and we gave plays, and we "spoke pieces," and did nice, decorous May Day dances.

But before we went we were all called into the great study hall, and seated in prim rows—and the etiquette teacher gave us a special lecture which she called the guest code.

Many things she told us and a few of them I still remember.

After telling us to pay for our own cab, if by some wierd chance our hostess did not meet us at the train with her own carriage, and instructing us that good guests were never finicky about food, but ate whatever was set before them, with ladylike gusto and appreciation, she went on to other angles of the proper conduct for guests.

"Never sit around waiting to be 'entertained.'

"Go, when your hostess goes, if she asks you, and stay at home if she doesn't ask you, take two hours every day to give your friends a breathing space.

"Go out for a walk by yourself, go to your room and write letters, hide somewhere and read a book—they'll begin to like you when you give them a chance to get rid of you for a certain time every day.

"And here is the most important rule of all:

"Never see anything at your friend's house that you are not supposed to see.

"Don't look under things and behind things, don't 'happen' into the kitchen when the cook is getting dinner.

"Don't be too near the telephone when your friend is talking to someone else, don't meddle—don't listen—don't spy.

"Your friend's house is her home—not yours, never forget that for one minute. And when you come back to school after the vacation and some tit-bred girl says to you, 'Are Mary's people rich?' Look at the inquirer with a long, cool, astonished look, and say:

"'I didn't ask.'"

Yes, I wish Helena had a few lectures on the guest's code—then she wouldn't come to my house and make remarks about everything in it.

She wouldn't listen in to everything said and she would be conveniently absent when Uncle George had one of his tempers, and Aunt Amelia gets temperamental.

Always there, just where you don't want her to be, poor Helena. Always seeing everything you hoped she wouldn't notice. No, I like Helena as a general thing, but I don't think I shall ever ask her to visit me again.

She is much too plentiful.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Hill Road

Hill road, let me wander
With you, where you go
Past the golden cactus,
Past the wild plums' snow,
Past the lace-veiled branches
Of the gnarled mesquite,
Past adobe hovels,
Sprawling in the heat.
Lead me to the steeper
Rock-strewn fields you gain,
So that, climbing with you,
I climb clear of pain!
Pain has clutching fingers
That would drag me down;
Pain that sears my spirit
In the crowded town.
Pain of too much striving!
Hill road, I would rest,
Past the basking lizards
Take me to your crest!

ISN'T IT SO?

Poverty is no sin.

Youth holds no society with grief.

Words that weep, and tears that speak.

The wine in the bottles does not quench thirst.

Ah me, how weak a thing the heart of woman is!

No rule is so general, which admits not some exception.

There can no great smoke arise, but there must be some fire.

The girl who marries for money may deserve a divorce without alimony.

Actions may speak louder than words, but women keep right on talking.

Human Side of the News

Repeal Fails to Bring Back Old Time After Dinner Oratory—Mulcahy Breaks Irish Revolt

By Edwin C. Hill

FOR better or worse, prohibition reduced after-dinner speaking to what Grover Cleveland used to call "innocuous desuetude." In the long 14 years during which it was unlawful to serve anything stronger than the one-half of one per cent liquids at a banquet table, the art of after-dinner oratory withered slowly but surely.

It was true that many gentlemen attending banquets went with something on the hip, and that there were, as a rule, certain private rooms at no great distance from the banquet rooms where courage and fortitude necessary to endure the common or garden after-dinner spouter might be obtained.

But the bloom was off the rose. It was all furtive and hasty. No longer could a banquet of a hundred or of two thousand get going with a new cocktail, sail gaily into the light wines, daily with champagne, the bottled laughter of the peasant girl of France, and end with Napoleon brandy.

The natural consequence was, human nature being what it is, that men simply would not sit for two or three hours, enduring a barrage of platitudes, without spiritual reinforcement. One by one, in that strange cycle of our national life, the great after-dinner speakers passed from the scene. Joseph H. Choate, Mark Twain, Chauncey M. Depew, Job E. Hedges, Patrick Francis Murphy, Simeon Ford, the topnotchers of the art.

And few, if any, ever arose to fill their shoes. One wonders if repeal and the new freedom, alcoholically speaking, will contribute to a revival of really worthwhile after-dinner speaking, of the colorful, witty, pungent talks which so distinguished the banquet appearances of Mr. Choate, of Mr. Depew, of Mr. Clemens, of Murphy and Hedges and Ford.

Youths Must Travel Fast

PERHAPS a new school of after-dinner wits is in the making, but even so, the younglings will have to travel fast and far to approach the records—records for tumultuous laughter and keen delight which the old boys made in their day and their heyday. This writer, as an active newspaper reporter, listened to and reported for his newspaper at least 500 public dinners at the big hotels and at such jovial clubs as the Lotos, and has very vivid memories of the courtly Choate, the suave Depew, the ironical Mark Twain, the debonair Murphy, who delighted to deal in paradoxes after the manner of G. H. Chesterton; of the dry and sarcastic Simeon Ford, and the rough, barking wit of Job Hedges.

Each and every one of them was a distinct personality. Choate had an impish wit, and there are plenty of men living who will never forget the St. Patrick's night at Delmonico's when Joseph H. Choate blandly invited the Irish to return to Ireland if they didn't like the way we ran the government.

Mark Twain, with his white hair curling all over his leonine head, was fond of wearing white flannels, white from head to foot, even at formal banquets, for Mark made his own formalities, and if others didn't care for them it merely delighted his often cantankerous soul.

Patrick Francis Murphy, an excellent businessman and an executive of a great New York store, was an extremely courteous person who spoke with a drawl and with a touch of the English accent. Wit, rather than humor was his forte.

Job Hedges, once a Republican candidate for Governor in New York state, liked to shock his hearers with truths often unpalatable to the listeners, and talked in explosive barks.

Sim Ford, perhaps the quaintest of the famous sextet, had a salty humor, rather rural, and had a way of writing and rewriting his "spontaneous" addresses many times before he sent the proofs to the newspapers well in advance of speaking.

Looking backward to those gentlemen, so witty, so courtly, one may well say, "there were giants in those days."

Mulcahy Big Shot Of White Guard

BACK in the black and bloody days of Sinn Fein against Black and Tans, it was said of Richard Mulcahy:

"He has the brains and the iron will which is holding the Irish rebels together."

Small, slim and mild spoken with soft, brown sorrowful eyes, he was the last man in the world that one would take to be the directing genius of the guerilla war which, in the end, was too much even for Proud Albion. The Irish are said to be impulsive and boastful, but not Dick Mulcahy.

He is somewhere around 40 and a native of Londonderry. The English discharged him from an obscure postal clerkship and catapulted him into the Sinn Fein rebellion. The dashing Michael Collins commanded the Irish rebels and was a hero and a legend to his people and to the Irish sympathizers the world over, but it was little Mulcahy as chief of staff, who laid the groundwork for Collins' exploits.

The Free States won; Sinn Fein split over the treaty. Collins was assassinated and South Ireland embarked on a war of self-extermination.

Then Mulcahy stepped in. As minister of defense he broke the rebellion, signing the death warrants of scores of those who had been his comrades in arms against the Black and Tans. The Sinn Fein extremists never have forgiven him this. Several attempts have been made on his life. He is a big shot now in the "White Guard," an organization of 15,000 of the Free State faction of the old army which is opposed to De-Valera's Republican army.

Army Air Chief Will Ask Court of Inquiry

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is expected to reject the demand of a subcommittee of the House Committee on Military Affairs that the Secretary of War immediately remove from office Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, United States Army.

To accede to this demand would be to deprive Gen. Foulois of that day in court which is the birthright of the humblest man, woman or child under the flag.

It would deny to Gen. Foulois that assumption of innocence, until he is proven guilty by due process of law, to which every American who looks to the flag for protection is entitled to receive under the government established by the federal constitution.

The sensational charges that he has been guilty of a series of serious offenses ranging from "gross misconduct" to downright "dishonesty," which were made in a special report to Congress by a subcommittee of the House Committee on Military Affairs, have been referred by Secretary Dern to Gen. Foulois for comment.

Those of his comrades with the colors who know him best say that the same courage and perseverance which brought him the high honor of flying with the Wright brothers, who were the first of all the children of men to fly, and took him from a private in the ranks to the grade of major general, which he now holds as chief of the Air Corps, will not fail him under the fire of any enemy, foreign or domestic.

* * *

Will Not Quit Under Attack

INSTEAD of "quitting under fire," Gen. Foulois is expected to assert his rights under the law and request a court of inquiry. This request the Secretary of War will doubtless promptly grant. This court of inquiry will give to Gen. Foulois that chance to be heard in his own defense, to face his accusers, to summon witnesses in his own behalf, which Postmaster General Farley denied to the holders of all domestic airmail contracts and Attorney General Cummings denied to Andrew W. Mellon when he pilloried him before the country before a federal grand jury cleared him.

The court of inquiry before which Gen. Foulois will be given a chance to defend himself against the attack of a congressional subcommittee must consist of three or more major generals of the Army who are senior to him in rank.

Among the major generals eligible for service on such a court are:

Maj. Gen. Fox Connor, at Boston, commanding the First Corps Area; Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, at New York, commanding the Second Corps Area; Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, at Chicago, commanding the Sixth Corps Area; Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, at Omaha, commanding the Seventh Corps Area; Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, at San Francisco, commanding the Ninth Corps Area; Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, at San Antonio, commanding the Eighth Corps Area; Maj. Gen. George V. H. Mohley, at Atlanta, commanding the Fourth Corps Area; Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, president of the Army War College, and Maj. Gen. Halstead Dorey, commanding the Second Division, with headquarters at San Antonio.

Case May Uncover Air Mail Facts

AS the defendant in what is destined to become one of the most celebrated courts of inquiry in all American military history, Gen. Foulois will have the right to challenge the assignment to the court of an officer whom he believes for any reason to be ineligible. He can also summon witnesses from both the Senate and House of Representatives, as well as from the Army and civil life.

In view of the fact that many of these witnesses are within easy reach of the national capital, the probability is that the federal city will be the scene of these extraordinary proceedings. And the findings of this tribunal may turn the searchlight of truth not only on some things that have been going on behind closed doors in the House committees on military affairs but also upon some things that happened in the Postoffice Department on that fatal day last February, when orders were issued which sent to an unnecessary death 12 of the bravest pilots who ever flew the colors of a great nation.
